Thomas F. Ryan Dead.
From Whitehall to M. F. and Co.
A Bootleg Climax.
When the Drop Comes.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

THOMAS FORTUNE RYAN is dead at 77.

One of the wisest Wall Street men said of Mr. Ryan long ago: "Ryan, if he chooses, can be the richest man in the world."

MR. RYAN got tired of working hard, or decided that he had enough. His fortune may reach $500,000,000. In one trust company which he controlled he kept $40,000,000 in cash. But all this amounts to little when the last day comes. Mr. Ryan's illness was probably aggravated by disappointment at the defeat of Gov. Smith.

THOMAS F. RYAN'S fortune of half a billion, which might as well have been one or two billions, is based on common sense and imagination.

Imagination made him see what could be done with the street car system of New York. Common sense told him "when and where to leave the corpse," as Mr. Cutten says, and he left the corpse in the hands of others.

Imagination made him buy diamond mines in Africa, and send his diamonds to England by airplane.

GIVE your imagination a chance, let common sense control it, and you may make five hundred million dollars. But five hundred million dollars won't necessarily make you happy.

As John E. Madden, of Kentucky, said yesterday to Mr. Joseph Uihlein, of Milwaukee, "The important thing is not to die rich, but to live rich."

MR. BALDWIN, in the House of Commons, is asked whether he knows that James Simpson, of Chicago, has been buying old panelings from the walls of Whitehall and selling them in the more modern halls of Marshall Field, in Chicago.

The British want laws passed to prevent exporting these "priceless works of art."

Baldwin won't get excited. He knows where the great works of art in the National Gallery on Trafalgar Square came from; he knows that the Elgin marbles, in the British Museum, were not cut from any British quarry.

ART and money go together. It was because they were the richest family that the Medici were able to do so much for art in their day.

However, the Medici, while buying Greek and other antiques, as did the cardinals and popes, also encouraged living artists. There is not enough of that encouragement in our day.

BOOTLEG whisky reached an interesting climax in Chicago. Arthur F. Falk came home drunk, shot and killed his son, 22 years old, when the son handed him a shotgun, saying, "Shoot me; I would rather be dead than the son of a drunkard."

The story, told in court, caused the jury to shed tears, and the prosecuting attorney, suddenly bursting into tears, refused to go on with the case. The man was acquitted in five minutes by the jury, after his wife and daughters, weeping, had testified against him.

CATHERINE SENFT, 15 years old, left her New Jersey home to work in Baltimore, Md. When her father ordered her home, she returned, shot herself dead on the doorstep, and was found holding a scrap of paper on which she had written: "Dear Dad, you ordered me home; here I am. Katherine."

These are emotional days.

NOT long ago, when the war began, the Stock Exchange closed, its rulers fearing what might happen. Today the stock exchange will close and give brokers a chance to rest and speculators a chance to get over the fever, if they can.

The whole country is in a stock buying fever, so that prices and real values in many cases have little connection.

Some wise ones, including Mr. B. Forman, of Rochester, N. Y., says:

"Look out for another Florida, only worse."

With stocks, as with Florida real estate, the values are there, but the public plays the fool.

IN THE first half hour yesterday stock exchange dealings were at the rate of 13,000,000 shares a day. Prices fell off, went up again, fell off again. The public doesn't know whether to run away or go in deeper.

Sales of a stock exchange seat was arranged for $550,000, highest price recorded. If this market could continue seats would be cheap at $1,000,000. But this market CAN'T last forever. It reminds you of an old colored man who told his clergyman, "I don't believe in eternal hell fire, because I don't believe no constitution could stand it."

THE British Empire worries about King George, a good man, faithful to his duty always. The doctors' statement that his temperature "remains at 101," and that there is "a slight extension of the mischief in his lungs," worries Britons. The big Empire is well organized and will run on no matter what happens.

In Africa the Prince of Wales shot a lion eight feet long. He'd rather do that than be King.

KEN STRONG

Strong by name, by nature—that's Ken Strong, star halfback of New York University and its main hope against Carnegie Tech in the outstanding game on today's national football card at Forbes Field. The national title is at stake in the battle. Strong is the best runner, passer and kicker of the Violets and the nation's leading point scorer.

PLAID BATTLES N.Y.U. WITH CHAMPIONSHIP HOPES AT STAKE

By JESS CARVER.

For the first time in history Pittsburgh and New York will fly at each other's throats with the football supremacy of the East at stake as the two chosen gridiron varsities, Carnegie Tech and New York University, battle at Forbes Field this afternoon.

Tech supporters this afternoon were offering odds of 10 to 8.

Carnegie, proud possessor of an undefeated record, with sparkling triumphs over Wash-Jeff, Pitt, Georgetown and Notre Dame chief among its possessions, faces one of the most powerful elevens that has ever come out of the East, the unblushing Violets of New York U.

The crimson-clad Tartans will come out of their hiding place in the wilds of the mountains today and find the city in the hands of a determined and tremendously powerful invader. Theirs is the task of driving from Pittsburgh these foemen—who are dangerously confident that they will leave the field the masters by nightfall. Experts favor Tech to win.

ENVIABLE RECORD

New York, save for an unfortunate defeat at the hands of Georgetown, has compiled an enviable record, having crushed Fordham, Missouri, Colgate, Rutgers and West Virginia Wesleyan under decisive scores. Smart, well drilled with an attack

QUIZ

LOTTIE PICKFORD

Federal authorities today are planning to quiz Lottie Pickford, sister of Mary Pickford, to see if she is the "Lottie Pickford" whose name is found in letters among the effects of Arnold Rothstein, mysteriously slain gambler.

TWO OF TRAFFORD BANDITS STILL AT LIBERTY

Two young women and four alleged gangsters were behind the bars in Central Police Station today, the contribution of city detectives toward the solution of the already partly solved holdup of the First National Bank in Trafford and the kidnaping of one of its depositors yesterday.

The girls and four men were turned over to the State Police at Greensburg by Magistrate Brandon in Morals Court today. At the hearing detectives revealed they had obtained the girls' Neville street address by means of a telephone number found on one of the men.

The prisoners did not participate in the actual holdup, but the sleuths feel they may know something about the movements of the two bandits who escaped with most of the $13,000 loot after their two accomplices had been arrested in Duquesne.

GIRLS CAUSE ARRESTS

The women were unwittingly responsible for the arrests, the detectives said.

Friends of the two arrested bandit suspects, they are said to have telephoned to other members of the "mob"—police call it the "Poolnews that Sam Fucci, 22, and Patrick Trader, 21, had been arrested in Duquesne.

With the pair when arrested was Oliver M. Kimmel, Trafford assessor, a patron of the bank, who was kidnaped as the bandits fled. The car they were driving, police said, was stolen and contained $954 of the bank loot.

So four members of the gang set out for Pittsburgh by auto.

Fairmont police learned of the girls' call and the gang's exodus.

They notified Pittsburgh authorities.

At 5 a. m. an auto bearing a West Virginia license swung out of the Liberty Tubes to Forbes street. Detectives followed. In Oakland they closed in on the car and took its four occupants.

The detectives then moved on to a Neville street rooming house

IDENTIFIES BOTT AS "BEER SHOOTER"

The jury sitting in judgment on 46 defendants, political leaders, police officials and alleged racketeers, accused as conspirators in a gigantic North Side rum ring, is spending its second week-end in seclusion, following a recital of "beer shooting," the first to be placed in the record.

Charles W. Bott, a defendant, foreman in the Fort Pitt Brewery, was accused as the "shooter" by Henry W. Kaufman, steward of the Excelsior Hunting and Fishing Club, which operated at 525 Suismon street. Near beer, purchased by the club from the Fort Pitt Brewery, was "shot" the night of its delivery or the following night, Bott appearing for the operation without any notice, according to Kaufman.

ENGLAND RELAXES AS ITS KING RESTS EASIER

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—Hope that the worst of King George's illness was passed was replacing today the alarm that followed the announcement that there was congestion in one lung when the official bulletin, issued this morning, stated that His Majesty had passed a fair night.

All court life, however, has been stopped. The court circular appearing in the morning papers was a brief four-line announcement, merely stating that the Queen of Spain, the Duke of York, Princess Louise, Princess Beatrice and the Dowager Marchioness of Cambridge visited Queen Mary yesterday.

At the end of an anxious day of watching for news from the sick room, the nation was somewhat relieved when the King's physicians issued an official bulletin which said:

"The King had a quieter day.

Ex-Star Of Films In Quiz

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Federal authorities last night were considering questioning Lottie Pickford, sister of the popular Mary, to ascertain if she can throw any light on any activities of Arnold Rothstein.

It was learned by the New York American that there are on file in Washington promisory notes purporting to be photostatic copies, signed by Miss Pickford. These are made out to Sidney Stager, Rothstein's secretary, and amount to more than $100,000.

The authorities are anxious to learn from this Miss Lottie Pickford if she is the Lottie Pickford who signed the notes.

NOTES TAKEN IN RAID

The notes themselves were seized last July 13, when members of the so-called "Rothstein squad," a group of federal narcotic agents under the command of Assistant United States Attorney John M. Blake, raided a room in the Prisament Hotel occupied by Stager and two other friends of Rothstein.

Along with the notes the agents seized a number of letters ad-

HOOVER'S WARSHIP HIT BY HEAVY GALE

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.
International News Service.

ABOARD U. S. S. MARYLAND, (VIA ARLINGTON, VA., RADIO STATION), Nov. 24.—The Dreadnought Maryland, carrying President-Elect Herbert Hoover on his good-will visit to Latin-America, ran into a 70-mile gale early today, but rode through it safely without damage.

The President-Elect was not disturbed by the stormy weather.

At the height of the gale, waves broke over the clipper bow, throwing spray as high as the signal bridge.

The water at times was four and five feet deep on both the forecastle and quarterdecks.

Capt. E. V. Kimberly, who took charge in person on the bridge, reduced the speed from 17 to six knots.

The storm signal division was routed out to rescue the canvas canopy on the bridge—a task which was made dangerous by the gale.

There was excitement on the bridge when a lifebuoy was washed overboard. Someone started the report it was a man, and Capt. Kimberly stopped the ship in heavy seas to make a search. But it was found that all were on board.

HOOVER WAKENED

All hatches, skylights and portholes were closed and sealed.

When the storm was at its height Mr. Hoover woke up. He walked around his cabin for about five minutes, but upon being assured

BUS HERE ON 10-CENT FARE MAKES PROFIT

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

A 10-cent bus fare is a reality just outside Pittsburgh's city limits. The line is operating at a profit in spite of the statements made by A. W. Robertson, president of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, that the unusual conditions met in this territory make a 25-cent fare necessary.

Since April 7 August Bamford has been giving the residents of Whitaker and Homestead bus service at the same fare found in most other communities.

The line operates from Ann and Eighth streets in Homestead out Whitaker avenue a distance of two and one-half miles.

The buses have more severe operating conditions than are found on any of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach routes. The line has to climb one of the steepest hills found on any of the main traveled streets in this district. The hill is not duplicated by any of the graduaf ascents made by Pittsburgh's 25 cent buses.

The Public Service Commission granted a certificate to operate the line only after a stiff fight in which the Pittsburgh Railways Company protested every step of the way. The stand of the street car company was typical of the blockading attempts made against almost every proposal to give cheap bus service to this district.

The Homestead line is the second 10-cent bus route found close to Pittsburgh by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. The Beaver Valley Motor Coach Company renders similar service in its territory and, incidentally, it is owned by the Philadelphia Company, which also controls the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company.

KATHRYN MULLEN

KITTY SHAFFER

Kitty Shaffer and Kathryn Mullen, both 18, and four men, all of Fairmont, W. Va., are held by Pittsburgh police today as confederates of the bandits who held up Trafford First National Bank yesterday. An intercepted 'phone call from the girls, in a Pittsburgh rooming house, to the Fairmont "Poolroom Gang" brought the arrests. The men were caught coming into the city in response to the call.

SEEK DEFENDANTS IN RUM PROBE; JAIL 1

The county jail today welcomed the first of the 248 indicted defendants in the county graft probe. Failing to post bond, John Lang, of 908 East street, North Side, was deposited behind the bars. Lang is charged with maintaining gambling devices, being a common gambler and violating the Snyder act.

Meanwhile county detectives today are seeking the others indicted upon the first presentment of the special grand jury, who have failed to come forward and post bond.

Fear that a legal technicality might invalidate such indictments caused Gardner to reach this conclusion today. The law provides that one grand jury shall make the presentment and the following

CLOSED EXCHANGE BRINGS LITTLE REST

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—Although a halt was called to the furious trading on the New York stock and curb exchanges for today, the offices of the exchanges and of the brokerage houses remained open and there was no rest for the harassed workers of Wall Street, as they toiled to clear away the congestion of the past fortnight's record-breaking transactions. Many will work until late tonight.

In these two weeks, more than 60,000,000 shares have changed hands on the stock exchange, nearly half as many as changed hands in a full year not much more than a generation ago. The two weeks' trading represents a turnover estimated at more than $5,000,000,000, or nearly one-third of the total national debt.

from which the girls had telephoned, roused them from their sleep and deposited all six in the police station.

WANTED IN W. VA.

The girls are registered as Kathryn Mullen, 18, and Mrs. Kitty Shaffer, 18, of Fairmont. Fairmont police said the girls might be asked about robberies in West Virginia towns.

The four men are docketed as Fay Brown, 21, of Fairmont; Harry Pious, 25; Michael Fucci, 23, and John Trader, 22, of Monongah, W. Va.

BROTHERS OF SUSPECTS

Fucci and Trader are said to be brothers of the two youths arrested in Duquesne with the kidnaped yardmaster and borough assessor, Oliver M. Kimmel, 45, immediately after the robbery.

Bank Bandits Split Their Loot, But Not Evenly

How do bank bandits divide? Here's how:

In McKeesport, as he left the stolen car, the bandit whom police identify as Davis, handed Trader and Fucci, the suspects under arrest, 954 $1 bills, and this information: "We're leaving, boys, here's your share."

Davis and his confederate left the auto with $12,000!

The bandits at large are somewhere today with $12,000 which they will split two ways instead of four, and enjoying a hearty laugh at the expense of the "Poolroom Gang," which they recently joined in Detroit.

The kidnaped Kimmel and Fred Schucha, teller at the bank, were almost heroes of the holdup. Kimmel, night yardmaster at the Pitcairn works of the Pennsylvania Railroad, walked into the bank a few minutes after it had opened to deposit part of his pay.

Kimmel noticed that with the cashier and two girl clerks in the cashier's department were three strangers. He approached Teller Schucha and noted the four bandits standing near Schucha. "I passed my bank book through the grating," Kimmel related, "and the stranger nodded to Fred. Fred made the entry very slowly and I walked out. On the sidewalk I looked at the book and this is what Fred had written:

"Sound an alarm. We are being held up."

Kimmel telephoned police from a nearby drug store. Then, as the first bandit left the bank he approached him, introduced himself as the borough assessor and asked the gangster if he wanted a job, hoping thus to delay the escape. The bandits' leader rushed from the bank, buried a gun in Kimmel's ribs and ordered him into the stolen getaway car.

GANG SPLITS

A wild ride to McKeesport followed. The gangsters decided to split up. The chief hopped from the car at Olympia Park, McKeesport. A few blocks distant, at Fifteenth and Walnut streets, No. 2 bandit slipped out.

They were the two who had the profits. They are the two police hunt for today. Their names, police say, are William Davis, 32, of Detroit, and just "Eddie," of Wheeling.

They left their pals with the kidnaped Kimmel—a burden under the circumstances—a stolen car and $954 of the stolen money.

At Grant and Duquesne avenues, Duquesne, the bandit car was captured. It required more than an hour for Kimmel to convince Duquesne police he was not one of the gangsters.

NO TRAIL VISIBLE

If the detectives had any trail on Davis and "Eddie" today it wasn't apparent. The two enriched mobsters told their confederates during the auto ride that they expected to "hop a rattler" East.

However, the sleuths were satisfied that with the arrest of the girls and the four men, they had prisoners with records. A telegram from Fairmont police today revealed that "Kittie" Schaefer and one "Slim" Harris were wanted for holding up a Western Union office in Cincinnati and for robbing the cab driver who took them from the Ohio city to Kentucky.

Hollywood Wonders If Barrymore-Costello Nuptials Will Take Place

SCENE FROM BARRYMORE-COSTELLO FILM

Today, unless objections are filed in writing, Hollywood (Cal.) marriage license bureau will grant permission for John Barrymore, noted actor, to wed his latest love, Dolores Costello, 22-year-old daughter of a former Pittsburgher. This is a love scene in which Miss Costello and Mr. Barrymore played.

"MICHAEL STRANGE"

A telephone call to the marriage bureau raises the question of whether Mr. Barrymore is divorced from Mrs. Barrymore No. 2, the former Blanche Oelrich, and later Mrs. Leonard M. Thomas, who writes poetry as "Michael Strange." An unidentified woman 'phoned, saying there is no divorce. Barrymore says there is and that "Michael Strange" is "somewhere abroad."

ANOTHER FILM LOVE SCENE

This is another Barrymore-Costello scene that has quickened the beats of feminine hearts all over the nation. Miss Costello's father, Maurice Costello, veteran screen actor and former Pittsburgh stock actor, has assumed immense interest and says "I certainly don't like the looks of things now."

MRS. BARRYMORE NO. 1

And as the time nears to grant the license under California law, Mrs. John Barrymore No. 1, the former Katherine Corri Harris, just sits by and watches the proceedings, apparently knowing nothing more of Barrymore's divorce from No. 2 than any one else.

STATE UPHOLDS INCREASED GAS RATE

The Public Service Commission has sustained rate increases made effective several years ago here by the Equitable Gas Company and Peoples Natural Gas Company. Decision was announced at a hearing before the commission in Harrisburg yesterday. Many previous hearings have been held on the increase, which has been under investigation by the commission for more than four years.

The commission, in upholding the increase, dismisses many complaints filed with that body by the cities of Pittsburgh and McKeesport and many boroughs and townships of Allegheny county and Western Pennsylvania. The two companies supply many communities in this county and surrounding territory.

The present rate upheld by the commission is 60 cents net per 1,000 cubic feet, or 63 cents minus a 3-cent discount for prompt payment. The rate of 50 cents was increased to 60 in 1924, and protests were made immediately to the commission.

If dissatisfied the communities making the complaints may appeal to the State Superior Court and from there if necessary, to the State Supreme Court. Attorney Charles P. Lang, special assistant city solicitor in charge of public utilities litigation for Pittsburgh, said last night he would wait until he had received the text of the commission's opinion before deciding upon further action. When it is received, Lang probably will confer with Council and officials of other protesting communities.

The commission's order dismissing the complaints declare that in neither case would the return under the new tariff schedules be an excessive net return upon a fair valuation of the properties of the two companies. The increase filed by the Natural Gas Company, effective November 15, 1921, and September 20, 1924, affected chiefly domestic and special consumers. The Equitable increase affected only the domestic, commercial and small industrial consumers.

Segrave Will Try To Regain Auto Speed Record

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(A.P.)—An attempt to regain the world's auto racing crown for England will be made in March by Maj. H. O. D. Segrave, English driver who startled the automotive world early last year with a straightaway mark of 203.79 miles per hour, nearly fifty miles an hour faster than the previous record.

Segrave's mark twice has been exceeded, once by a countryman, Capt. Malcolm Campbell and again by Ray Keech, American, who holds the present record of 207.55 miles per hour.

that everything was all right, he returned to bed and was soon sound asleep again.

The seas hammered the Wright Corsair seaplane on the quarterdeck so badly that the course of the ship was changed to allow the plane's removal so that it would not be pounded to pieces.

Before the course of the ship was changed two aviation officers, who were trying frantically to save the seaplane, were caught by a comber and thrown a dozen feet up against the hatches. Neither was injured beyond a shaking up.

Sailors sleeping on the forecastle deck were caught unawares and some of the cots were washed overboard.

Minister's Father Dies in New Phila.

'BEER SHOOTER' NAMED IN PROBE

Ralph H. Smith had sought unsuccessfully to establish that near beer had been "shot."

Some consideration was given to having a session today but Smith stated he would be unable to complete the prosecution. Its completion had been scheduled for Monday noon, but it may not be completed until late Monday or Tuesday.

Witnesses taken before the present Federal grand jury yesterday were said to be concerned with the conspiracy on trial, but no indication was forthcoming as to the purpose of United States Attorney John D. Meyer. Other witnesses taken before the grand jury during the past week were reported to be connected with the North Side charges.

"SHOOTING" OF BEER

Kaufman testified he paid Bott in cash at the rate of $3 a barrel for "shooting" the near beer on the club premises at various times, also paying Bott for alcohol. The evidence was obtained with the aid of club records showing payments for the "shooting" operation. The operations extended over two years, Kaufman said.

Kaufman identified Bott in the court room. He also identified Fred Stratman as the person from whom he had purchased a case of whisky for $75.

Clubs which dispensed whisky, moonshine and beer figured prominently in the testimony yesterday. In some cases it was testified that liquor and beer is still being bought and retailed. James J. McGregor, of 2215 Spring way, city fireman, who said he was president of the Collis Club, 900 James street, Twenty-third Ward, testified that the club sold beer at 15 cents a glass which was purchased from Stratman for $40 a barrel, moonshine at 25 cents a drink and "good" liquor at 50 cents a drink which was purchased from a "Whitey," otherwise unidentified. The beer was "supposed" good beer, he said.

dressed to Stager and signed "Lottie." But there was nothing in these missives to explain the promissory notes.

The original notes and letters are believed now to be in the possession of the Federal Narcotic Bureau in Washington.

There is another matter concerning which federal authorities would like to interrogate Miss Pickford. On November 9, three days after Rothstein's death, she reported to the Los Angeles police that she had been kidnaped, beaten and robbed by four men who attacked her in the Hollywood hills.

Her companion, Jack Daugherty, former husband of Barbara La Marr and Virginia Brown Faire, was knocked unconscious, Miss Pickford said. She told the police that her assailants left Daugherty in the street and drove her to a lonely part of the hills. There, she said, she was beaten and robbed of her watch and necklace.

Los Angeles police have been unable to find any traces of the assailants.

RYAN FUNERAL TO BE HELD MONDAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(INS.)—Funeral services for Thomas Fortune Ryan, famous old-time financier, who died here yesterday at the age of 77, will be held here Monday at the Church of St. Jean Baptiste. A solemn high requiem mass will be sung at the church at 10 o'clock Monday.

The body then will be sent to Richmond, Va., where interment will take place in a special vault in the $1,000,000 cathedral, which the financier built in that city. Burial in the cathedral is one of the highest honors that can be paid a Catholic layman.

The last rites of the Roman Catholic Church were administered here by the Rev. J. A. Pauze, of St. Jean Baptiste. Mr. Ryan was reported to have contributed a million dollars toward construction of the church.

The noted financier, who left his ancestral home in Livingston, Va., when 15, to make his way in the world with only $17 in his possession, accumulated a gigantic fortune. Estimates today placed the estate at figures varying from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000, with some reports placing it as high as $500,000,000.

Most of the late financier's relatives were at the Ryan home here today, with the exception of a son, Allan A. Ryan, who is in Europe. The latter became estranged from his father when the elder Ryan took a second wife, in 1917, two weeks after the death of Allan's mother.

WELFARE WORKERS STRIVE TO RAISE FUND TO $800,000

From all parts of Allegheny county men and women came today to the headquarters of the Welfare Fund in the Chamber of Commerce Building to deposit money collected in the house-to-house canvass for 25 local philanthropies. In canvas bags, suitcases and bulging envelopes they brought cash and checks amounting to thousands of dollars.

The contributions were quickly checked and under an armed guard taken and deposited. The money was placed in a large trunk and protected by four armed men while it was carried to an armored car. More than $50,000 in cash has been received from the house-to-house canvass.

MONEY MOVED RAPIDLY

"No money is allowed to remain in the office longer than the time necessary to have it tabulated and checked," said Secretary W. F. Maxwell, of the Welfare Fund. "As a result it is moved rapidly to the vaults and all the time is securely guarded. The cash contributions practically are all in, and further money will come in the form of checks or in sums which will be deposited directly in bank. No money is kept in the office."

Over the week-end the workers continued their canvass. With a total of $737,418.21 reported yesterday, efforts are being put forth to increase the amount over $800,000 in the reports which will be made at the next luncheon meeting, Tuesday.

LEADING CAPTAINS

T. Templeton Smith presided at yesterday's meeting and introduced representatives of the various organizations in the Welfare Fund. The team captains showing the best records for the day were E. T. Weir, of the iron and steel group; Mrs. Albert Wells, a special team; Mrs. W. P. Witherow, of the Fourteenth Ward, and Mrs. Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley.

ENGLAND CALM AS KING RESTS

His temperature is lower and there was no further extension of the mischief in the lung."

SEA TRIP EXPECTED

If the King's illness now follows a mild course leading to recovery, there is little doubt that he will be advised as soon as convalescent to take another sea trip as he did during his last serious illness about four years ago. His physician at that time urged him never to spend another winter in England. The King, however, set public devotion to duty first and this, added to his well known love of life in his home country, induced him to ignore the medical advice.

The hope inspired by the earlier bulletin, that there was no extension of the trouble in the lung, grew when it was stated at Buckingham Palace, just before midnight, that the King was continuing to make satisfactory progress.

Malone Urges P. R. R. Build New Passenger Station in Big Improvement Plan

Construction of a modern passenger terminal, costing probably millions of dollars, to meet Pittsburgh's immediate and future demands will be urged upon the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in a resolution to be presented to Council next Monday by President James F. Malone.

The measure parallels the railroad company's extensive developments, locally, of modern freight and produce terminals with the desired passenger station.

Coincidentally, the resolution will propose that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company acquire property on the south side of Penn avenue from Eleventh street easterly and dedicate the land to the city, which in turn will use the ground to widen the thoroughfare to 120 feet.

Under recent legislation, the city gave the railroad company the area of Liberty avenue between Eleventh and Sixteenth streets. The company, as a consideration, acquired and donated to the city enough land on the south side of Spring way to widen that thoroughfare to 70 feet as a substitute artery for the closed area of Liberty avenue.

Those transfers were made in a co-operative move to permit the railroad company to extend northwardly its terminal facilities.

Malone's new resolution will provide for trading Spring way, as widened, to the railroad company in exchange for property it might acquire on the south side of Penn avenue to widen that thoroughfare to 120 feet.

With the consummation of the proposed plan, the railroad company would have area needed to extend its terminal to the south building line of Penn avenue, and the city would have a highway 120 feet wide.

In addition to giving the city a passenger terminal in keeping with Pittsburgh's rank in major cities of the nation, the present plan contemplates the extension of Penn avenue as a wide modern highway to the line of Wilkinsburg borough.

The first step was taken by the passage, some time ago, of an ordinance widening Penn avenue to 80 feet from Negley avenue to the easterly city line. Another step under consideration provides for the widening of Penn avenue between Negley and Shady avenues. Malone hopes that, through favorable action on his forthcoming resolution, the way will be opened to widen Penn avenue from the easterly end of the railroad company's proposed improvement to Negley avenue.

The forthcoming resolution will authorize the president of Council to appoint special committees of Council and other city officials "to negotiate with the Pennsylvania Railroad Company toward the working out of a program that will assure the City of Pittsburgh a modern and adequate passenger terminal that will meet the present demands and the demands of the future also, and that will conform to the modern and freight and produce terminals that the railroad company has already provided and at the same time provide the City of Pittsburgh with a 120-foot Penn avenue east of Eleventh street."

Woman's Clothes No Credit Rater, Cabby Learns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP.) The woman doesn't always pay and clothes don't necessarily make the woman. That is the conviction of Ovidio Piani, a taxi driver, who is $310 richer in experience and that much out in cash.

Because his passenger from Washington to Philadelphia and return was well dressed Piani didn't worry about the fare; not until she failed to appear after entering an apartment house here for a moment at the termination of the trip. Piani investigated, found a side door, and took his story to the police.

SPEAKER BACKS REDISTRICTING FOR HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Speaker Nicholas Longworth yesterday came out strongly for reapportionment of the House of Representatives, based on the 1920 census, at the incoming short session of Congress.

As a model for such legislation, Longworth suggested that the Fenn reapportionment bill, which failed at the last session, should be used, possibly with some modifications.

The outstanding feature of the Fenn Bill is that it provides for reappointment upon a basis of the 1920 census, and also provides for the automatic reapportionment of the House after each decennial census in future. Also it provides that the House shall remain at its present maximum of 435 members, thus avoiding the increases which occurred after each reapportionment in the past.

Representative McLeon, (Rep.), of Michigan, already has announced his intention to make reapportionment the first order of business in the House, if possible, when Congress convenes. With the support of Speaker Longworth, it is believed such legislation has a greatly increased chance of passage.

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The 15-year-old wife of Fred Alley, brother of Emma Alley, 16, whose body, with the head crushed, was found by hunters along a highway near here last Saturday, was placed in the county detention home yesterday upon the petition of the girl's mother, Mrs. Mary Maslyk.

Mrs. Maslyk charged in her petition that her daughter was incorrigible and that the home of Fred Alley was an "unfit" place for her.

Sam Alley, father of the slain girl, and his two sons, Abraham and Fred, were questioned further today by detectives and state police. Fred Alley was said to be in the Butler barracks of the state constabulary.

BARRYMORE MAY HEAR WEDDING BELLS TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—Despite uncertainty regarding the status of the reported divorce of John Barrymore and his second wife, mysterious preparations in Screenland were believed to indicate that wedding bells would ring quietly for the actor and Dolores Costello at a private ceremony in Hollywood today.

Mystery surrounding the proposed nuptials of the stage and screen star and his film actress fiancee, was heightened last night when a huge wedding cake, said by a downtown catering establishment to have been ordered by Barrymore, was delivered to an unrevealed address. The destination of the wedding cake had not been disclosed this morning.

Reporters and cameramen hoped to pick up Barrymore's trail at the marriage license bureau when he calls for the license which he applied for three days ago.

DIVORCE IS MOOTED

The actor declined again yesterday to state when and where his second wife, Blanch Oelrich, who is known under the pen name of Michael Strange, obtained a divorce from him.

After it was reported he had applied for the license to wed, an unknown woman telephoned the marriage bureau and voiced caution in granting the license, declaring that he was not yet divorced.

Both Barrymore and Miss Costello have taken precautions to keep the time and place of their marriage a complete mystery even to friends and studio executives. Neither has amplified Barrymore's brief written statement that he and the 26-year-old screen star were to wed, and that his second wife had obtained a divorce.

Maurice Costello, film actor and producer and father of the prospective bride, was reported to be still agitated over the question of Barrymore's last divorce and his daughter's plan to marry under the circumstances.

His first statement after the announcement was: "I think he ought to clear up the situation. As long as it ended up in a wedding it was all right with me, but I certainly don't like the looks of things now."

M'MANUS NEAR INDICTMENT IN N. Y. SLAYING

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—District Attorney Banton was believed today to be preparing to go before the grand jury Monday to ask the indictment of George McManus in the slaying of Arnold Rothstein, the big-time gambler.

MacManus, reputed operator of floating card games and close friend of Rothstein, has been described by the district attorney as the man who could "clear up this whole thing in three minutes."

But since Rothstein was fatally shot November 4, supposedly in room 349 of the Park Central Hotel, McManus has eluded the authorities.

Although Mr. Banton declined to discuss the matter, the report persisted that he would resort to an indictment in order to get his hands on McManus. The latter is reputed to have been hiding just over the New York state line.

The police have been working on the theory that while McManus was present, the actual shooting was done by a professional gunman.

Playing a star role in the new turn of events is Mrs. Ruth Keyes, Chicago cloak model and wife of a railroad brakeman, whose arrival Tuesday broke an impasse in the inquiry. She has identified a photograph of McManus as that of the "Mac" she had several drinks with in Room 349 a few hours before Rothstein was shot. She met two other men in the room, she told police.

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas J. Todarelli revealed yesterday that Rothstein had long been known to the government as one of the "higher ups" in a local narcotic smuggling ring.

Competition Chief Enemy Retarding Coal Trade, Conference Told

Competition, long regarded as the life of trade, should be looked upon as the chief foe of the coal industry, Sir Alfred Mond declared by proxy to the second international coal conference, which held its last session today under the auspices of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

In a paper read to the conference by Grant B. Shipley, the noted British scientist and industrialist, predicted that the basic coal industry would reach stability only through amalgamation. He foresaw the day when billions in waste would no longer pour from factory stacks and dwelling chimneys in the form of smoke, when coal would be the raw material of the chemist rather than of the stoker and when the mines would be subject to national—and perhaps international—control.

SUPPLIES ARE WASTED

The coal industry has not kept pace with other industries in utilizing to the fullest extent the knowledge gained by research, Sir Alfred said. Because it is backward, the fuel supplies of the world are being wasted and economic progress impeded, he declared.

"The present perspective of the coal trade is that it is threatened by two evils," he said. "One of them a good one, as we would say in Ireland; namely, the evil of wasteful competition and overproduction, and the good one of lessened trade due to the constantly increasing efficiency in the use of coal.

"Deficient as the means of coal gaining are in many coal producing areas throughout the world, incomplete as has been the application of the latest technical developments and improvements to the mines, it is my firm belief that the main line of salvation lies in a better organization of the industry. It must commence nationally. It must be extended to embrace the European coal producing countries, and ultimately the coal producing countries of all the world.

REMAINS BASIC ADVANTAGE

"Coal remains a basic national advantage of those countries which have ample reserves. Its national advantage would be greatly increased, and the first fruits of its new effect upon other industries would be hastened if the coal industry could only bring itself into line with modern commercial scientific and economic development. Those countries which are prepared to insist that their coal industry shall be rationalized, which are prepared to apply modern technical advances in the production of coal, those countries which, irrespective of immediate results, will continue long-period researches into fuel problems will still see coal is king."

Howard Eavenson, Pittsburgh consulting engineer, also stressed the importance of unification in the industry, and suggested the formation of a coal research board to consolidate the study of fuel technology. He urged that such a board be created to center in Pittsburgh and that it enlist the aid of the Bureau of Mines, Mellon Institute and other agencies already engaged upon the problems of more efficient fuel production and use.

What the French have learned about cheaper motor fuels was told to the conference by A. Guiselin, secretary of the French International Petroleum Commission. Compressed coke oven gases, transported in light strong tubes, may be a cheaper and more efficient fuel for auto engines than gasoline, he said. He described tests in which two motor buses used such fuel for long runs.

POWER FROM THE SEA!

At a popular session of the conference last night, Georges Claude, French inventor, told of his latest dream—the production of power from the sea. Many scientists have received skeptically Claude's ideas for utilizing the sea as a source of power, but in other quarters he has won a respectful hearing because of his eminent past.

Claude is the inventor of the neon light, which in the last 10 years has been painting America's advertising skyline red. He evolved a process for the production of synthetic ammonia, which has cheapened the cost of fertilizer and stimulated French agriculture.

During the war he perfected a system for compressing chlorine, just after the Germans had unleashed clouds of that gas upon the British at Mons and at a time when the Allied leaders were despairing of finding an effective answer to the new weapon. Like America's Edison, he rose from obscurity by his own efforts, and he is extremely popular with the French people. His standing as a scientist is avouched by his membership in the French Academy of Science, the Institute of France and the French Society of Engineers.

MECHANICS OF INVENTION

His newest invention—which, if practical, may vastly effect, if not shape, the civilization of the future—depends upon the fact that in tropical seas the surface water is about 25 degrees warmer than the water at the sea's bed. Claude contends that by evaporating the warm surface water in a chamber cooled by the deep water he can obtain a pressure of steam sufficiently great to turn a turbine.

A demonstration of the system was given at Ougree, Belgium, before 30 members of the Academy of Science. On that occasion Claude operated a 30-horse power generator by using cold water from the River Meuse in conjunction with warm waste water from an industrial plant.

Living Cost High, French President's Pay Doubled

Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 24.

THE high cost of living having invaded the Elysee Palace, the home of the French presidents, Parliament yesterday took cognizance of that fact and doubled the salary and expense allowance of President Gaston-Doumergue. It fixed his total stipend at 3,600,000 francs a year, raising it from 1,800,000 francs.

Before the war the presidents of France received 1,200,000 francs gold each 12 months. This was equivalent then to $240,000. Yesterday's raise, while doubling the President's pay in paper francs, corresponded to only $144,000 at par and only $140,760 at current exchange rates.

Despite the 100 per cent increase, President Doumergue will receive almost $100,000 less than his predecessors, Fallieres, Loubet and Poincare.

President Doumergue is a bachelor and one of the most economical of all occupants of the French White House.

President Still Undecided on Next Job

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—President Coolidge still is without any plans as to what he will do after he leaves office.

The chief executive has seen the publication of repeated rumors of this or that position that he might take after March 4, but he feels that everyone can consider these as only rumors until announcement comes from him to the contrary.

At any rate, it is possible that Mr. Coolidge will follow closely the precedent set by Woodrow Wilson, who did not announce that he would take up the practice of law until a few hours before he left the presidency. The president feels that he will not definitely decide what he intends to do, until after March 4.

NEW WAGE PLAN STUDIED BY TEACHERS

An independent study of the new salary schedules recommended for public school teachers by a committee of citizens, has been started by the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association. Provisions of the new schedules were laid before more than 2,000 local teachers by Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of public schools, at two large meetings.

Dr. Davidson addressed 1,850 elementary school teachers in Memorial Hall yesterday and at a gathering Thursday night in the same place he spoke to 1,000 high school teachers. At both meetings Dr. Davidson, in addition to explaining the schedules, lauded the service of the committee that formulated the plan.

Committees composed of senior high school, junior high school and elementary school teachers will study the plan and determine whether the schedules shall be recommended to the Board of Education, Miss Maude Walker, president of the teachers' association, said last night. The teachers themselves have not yet had a chance to study the provisions of the schedule.

4,000 ATTEND 30-ACT WELFARE FUND SHOW

More than 4,000 Pittsburghers went to work today with sleep in their eyes—for sweet charity's sake.

They were the men and women, who, at 4 o'clock this morning, walked happily but sleepily from the Stanley Theater, after watching more than four hours of entertainment.

And they formed the same crowd that, by supporting the mammoth show of the Variety Club, under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, will enrich the coffers of Pittsburgh's Welfare Fund by thousands of dollars.

More than 200 performers and musicians gave of their services. Easily 100 more officials, stage mechanics, and ushers helped the Variety Club to stage its 30-act show, swift-moving panoramic—perhaps the city's greatest glimpse of stageland's repertory.

Dancing, melody, comedy—every type of entertainment was included in the varied presentations. There was the complete stage unit from Loew's Penn Theater, headed by the master of ceremonies, Teddy Joyce; there were a dozen acts from the numerous theaters of the Harris Amusement Company, the Davis and other Stanley company houses, the Nixon and Alvin Theaters had their representations and a number of night clubs turned over their talent for the testimonial performance.

And not only were the actors and actresses, musicians and stage experts from the other theaters assisting, but even ushers from Pittsburgh's many houses co-operated in the gigantic show.

Shortly before midnight, every seat was occupied and many hundreds stood in the promenade to see the performance. The Stanley Concert Orchestra played an overture, the audience sang the Variety Club song, Bernard Armstrong and John Mitchell played an organ songalogue—and the show was on.

Teddy Joyce and the Penn band with their stage show, "Step On It," followed. Joyce turned his baton over to Fred Stritt, of the Davis Theater, who became permanent master of ceremonies. In swift succession the stars from the Davis, Harris, Nixon, Sheridan Square, Alvin, South Hills and other theaters came. The Nixon and Flotilla Club restaurant entertainers concluded the list.

RUMANIAN HERE TO FINANCE SEA FLIGHT

Lieut. George G. Frenic, late of the Rumanian air service, is in Pittsburgh to further plans for a non-stop 5,000-mile flight from New York to Bucharest in an airplane of a new type he designed.

It is to be a good-will flight, designed to cement more firmly the bonds of friendship between the United States and Rumania. To promote it, Fernic has been visiting Rumanian colonies in the Pittsburgh district during the past week. There are about 15,000 Rumanians in Allegheny county.

CARRIES SAFETY WING

Fernic's craft is a monoplane with a small auxiliary wing some distance ahead of the main wing. This innovation, according to Alexander Klemin, of the College of Engineering, New York University, who is head of the Daniel Guggenheim School of Aeronautics, provides a safeguard against the stalling of the engine that occurs on a steep climb, a frequent source of accidents. The stall, when it occurs near the ground, is often followed by a spinning nose dive.

The main wing of the Fernic monoplane has a span of 60 feet. The fuselage is 48 feet long. The gross weight of the airplane, when loaded with 1,000 gallons of gasoline, will be 10,000 pounds. The fuselage and wings are covered with mahogany ply wood and built in air-tight compartments. This will keep the airplane from sinking if it should fall into the water.

110-MILE SPEED

The machine is equipped with two Wright whirlwind engines. A novel feature is a steerable front landing wheel, which makes it possible to apply the brakes powerfully without danger of nosing over.

The plane will have a landing speed of 68 miles per hour. Top speed is expected to be 110 miles per hour, and as gasoline is consumed and the craft's load becomes lighter, it will be able to travel faster.

Fernic is building the plane at the old Bellanca plant on Staten Island, where the Columbia, in which Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine flew from New York to Germany, was built. On his return from the flight to Bucharest, Fernic plans to manufacture commercial planes accommodating 12 passengers.

SOUTHERN ROUTE FAVORED

Fernic intends to follow the southern route across the Atlantic. He intends to take an American navigator with him, but has not selected him yet. The plane will be equipped with radio apparatus.

With his secretary, Capt. Alexander M. Socec, formerly of the Rumanian army, and D. G. Procupp, local Rumanian banker, Lieut. Fernic has been addressing groups of Rumanians in Woodlawn, Glassport, Ellwood City and New Castle. Rumanian-Americans are financing the flight and have so far contributed more than $40,000.

JAIL AX-FIEND SUSPECT

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 24.—(AP.)—While Jake Bird, Negro, ex-convict from Utah, was held at the state penitentiary at Lincoln as a hatchet slayer suspect, police maintained another all night patrol over the city.

According to Deputy Sheriff John Dunn, Mrs. Harold Stribling, latest victim of the maniac, screamed, "That's the man," when Bird was taken before her yesterday. Nurses and Mrs. E. C. Henry, wife of Stribling's physician, said that what Mrs. Stribling said was, "Take him away," and that she refused to say whether he was the man.

Bird stoutly denied any connection with the hatchet killings and attacks and maintained he was being "railroaded."

Police Inspector B. F. Danbaum said he must have more evidence to convince him that Bird is the man wanted.

VESTRIS PROBES MAKE LITTLE PROGRESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(INS.)—The two separate inquiries into the sinking of the liner Vestris off the Virginia coast on November 12 will be resumed here Monday with but little headway made during the first week's investigation toward determining the cause of the disaster that cost 110 lives.

The investigators admit that the vessel may have foundered from any one of five causes.

Four of the five theories were advanced by Capt. E. P. Jessup, nautical adviser in the inquiry being conducted by United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle. He expressed the opinion that the liner foundered either because of water pouring into the ship through a faulty ash ejector and through the starboard coal ports that had not been kept tight; because of the springing of a seam in the vessel's hull as the result of some undiscovered structural defect; because the piping under the coal bunkers carried away; or because rivets in the hull of the Vestric broke in the storm which preceded the disaster.

BAPTIST LEADER DIES IN SOUTH

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The Rev. E. Y. Mullins, outstanding Baptist leader, died at his home here yesterday, death ending a career that carried the son of a Texas preacher from printer's devil to a position of leadership and authority in national and international denominational affairs.

Death, coming just at noon, with his wife and three sisters watching at the bedside, followed a stroke of paralysis on November 10 from which he was unable to rally. Dr. Mullins was nearly 69 years old and for the last 29 years had been president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary here.

Public funeral services will be held at the church tomorrow afternoon.

TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY AGAIN INDICTED FOR FRAUD

The Federal grand jury yesterday returned the second indictment this week against Elliott Frederick, of Pittsburgh. The first indictment charged Frederick with embezzlement of bankrupt estates for which he was trustee.

The indictment returned yesterday charged him with embezzling $750 from the estate of the Eagle Paint and Varnish Company. This estate was overlooked in the former indictment.

An indictment also was returned against Roscoe M. La Vey, accusing him of selling, transporting, possessing and manufacturing intoxicating liquor. The indictment papers also allege that La Vey offered "protection" to places where liquor was sold.

Stephen J. Brut and Edwin B. Kolle were indicted for alleged intimidation of Edward Girson, a witness in a court trial, and A. Kolle, alias Carl Apple, of Crafton, was indicted for impersonating a government officer and conspiracy.

Sharon Runaways Believed Flying Field-Bound

Drawn by the romance of flying, two Sharon boys, who left their homes last night are being sought at local aviation fields today by county detectives. Sharon police last night sent out a request to detain Tom Block, 17, and William Thomas, 16, who cranked their flivver last night and started for Pittsburgh.

According to the Sharon police both came prepared for the rigors of winter flying. Block was reported to have a great top coat, and Thomas was encased in a leather fur-lined coat. Both wore goloshes.

WOMAN DEAD, POLICE SEEK ATTACKER

Deputy coroners and police today are investigating the death of Mrs. Jennie Schott, 51, of 357 Omega street, East End, who died in Pittsburgh Hospital late yesterday from a beating, police say, suffered in her home 10 days ago. A search has also been started for Dominick Poalina, 36, a former boarder in the Schott home, who was arrested as the alleged attacker but released later upon the payment of a $50 fine.

Police arrested Poalina at the Schott home November 14, when they were notified the woman had been beaten. Mrs. Fehott refused medical attention and would not say who had beaten her. Police say they learned Poalina had beaten the woman. The next morning Poalina was fined $50 and given his freedom because no one appeared against him. He is now believed to be in New York.

Yesterday Mrs. Schott was rushed to the hospital after her condition became critical. At the county morgue last night it was said that a cerebral hemorrhage had caused death, the hemorrhage induced by a beating. The woman's body was badly bruised, the autopsy showed.

13 MILES OUT, FLOATING MONTE CARLO DEFIES LAW

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The Monfalcone, a floating Monte Carlo, alleged successor to the Johanna Smith, a gambling ship which recently was confiscated by authorities, put out to sea yesterday and took up a position 13 miles off the coast of Long Beach.

Its vaunted "wall of legal protection" was besieged last night by Los Angeles county officials.

H. O. Dougherty, one of the vessel's owners, said, "Nobody can touch us. We are outside the jurisdiction of the mainland courts, and therefore inside the law."

The Los Angeles county district attorney's office indicated that it would proceed against the Monfalcone and its solicitation boats on the grounds of conspiracy.

One point may have been overlooked by the owners of the vessel, Deputy District Attorney Ed Dennison, a student of maritime law, maintained. He said that reports available indicated that the ship had no registry papers, and if that were true, could be classed as a pirate ship.

"THE HEART SONG" IS READY TO SHOOT BUT SINGER IS NOT ON HAND

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright, 1928, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 24.

"THE HEART SONG" is waiting to be sung. But the singer is missing. In other words, Director D. W. Griffith is all set to shoot the talking sequences for the film which has had its name changed from "The Love Song." And Jetta Goudal, the former De Mille "Cocktail of Temperament," is nowhere to be found. Which makes it tough because the exotic Jetta has a very important role in the speaking version of the film.

They say that Jetta stuck around for a month or so awaiting decisions as to when she would be needed. Finally she grew weary of waiting and packed her overnight bag. Something tells me that Hollywood's mystery lady is in New York. So if anyone spies her it will be a favor to United Artists if you'll tell her to please come home and that all is forgiven. If Jetta isn't located soon the dialogue will have to be rewritten, and the fans will miss the treat of hearing her adorable accent.

Incidentally, no less a celeb than Irving Berlin renamed "The Love Song" with its new title "The Heart Song." Moreover, he has composed the theme which will accompany the picture. The song writers are everywhere these days. Since the days of "Mickey" songs have been popularizing pictures, and vice versa. However, it remained for Johnny O'Connor, who writes about movies and vaudeville, to inspire a song with a book. "My Broadway Racketeer" is the title of a popular number composed in honor of his volume, "Broadway Racketeers."

Treasury Yawns For Sue Carol

SUE CAROL never dreamed that movie actresses made so much real money as has been offered to her since the break with Douglas MacLean. Sue's offer from Fox calls for a reported pay envelope of $1,250 weekly. This, they say, has been topped by a wail from Pathe just begging Sue to accept $2,000 from them each Saturday night. It is understood, however, that Sue is definitely tied up with Fox. In any event Hollywood seems determined to give the little girl a big salary.

Viola Dana is back home after a too-long absence and reports that she is again pals with her husband, "Lefty" Flynn, the big tackle and touchdown man from Yale. The couple were seen together in Manhattan, but it is nice to hear the news of the reconciliation confirmed by Viola. "Lefty," himself, will be back in Hollywood by Thanksgiving.

Apparently there are no plans for an Al Jolson picture to be Vitaphoned by Warner Brothers prior to next spring. It may take that length of time to get set on a story and make all necessary arrangements. Al says that he will write the yarn himself. The title may be "Mammy," and it may be "Sonny Boy."

Fox seems to be following suit in the matter of studio shake-ups. It is learned on good authority that a pretty clean sweep of Fox writers will be made within the next couple of weeks. In fact, notices galore are to be passed out with the current week's salary checks. No actors or directors are affected.

Young Russian Bans Hollywood

A STORY emanating from Nice, where Constance Talmadge is making her picture, "Venus," declares that Rex Ingram and his entire studio are wild about the possibilities of the young Russian actor who is Connie's leading man. His name is unpronounceable, but from all accounts his acting is superb. The odd part is that he absolutely declines to consider a Hollywood contract no matter what inducements are thrust before him. Constance will return in January, when various offers will be considered. The name of this film will be changed for fear that it may be confused with one of the star's American-made pictures, "Venus From Venice."

You never saw anyone so happy over a lawsuit as is Adolphe Menjou over that which demands his presence in New York. It seems as though Adolphe would be glad to accept a summons a day if he could thereby remain in Gotham. During his absence Paramount is tearing its hair trying to find a story to appeal to him. Menjou turned thumbs down on "The Concert." He is one of the very few stars whose contract gives him the entire say-so regarding the films in which he appears. They say that Adolphe's contract is the most remunerative and desirable in all of Hollywood.

Pickford Kin Extra in Films

IF you were Mary Pickford's cousin would you be satisfied to work as an extra girl in the movies? Isabelle Sheridan is Mary's cousin, and she is quite content to begin at the bottom and work up. Isabelle, an 18-year-old blonde beauty, is working in John Barrymore's photoplay, "King of the Mountains." She is one of hundreds providing "atmosphere." But by the way she is going after a career, she won't be an extra very long.

Hiking through Hollywood I heard about Erich Von Stroheim referring to "Queen Kelly," Gloria Swanson's picture, as a "quickie" because it must be completed in 10 weeks. Colleen Moore personally entrusting her picture, "Synthetic Sin," to the aviator who will take the film East for sound synchronization. Alice Joyce planning for the Broadway opening of her stage play, "The Marriage Bed." Hollywood's champion beauty contest winner, Helen Fairweather, victor in 32 pulchritude races, rejoicing in a First National contract. Joseph M. Schenck, the "biggest" man in pictures, shaking hands with "Little Billy," the smallest one. Gertrude Astor vamping some chile at Henry's. Marita Cuda thrilled over a long distance telephone conversation to Budapest, Hungary. Jerry Hoffman being pointed out as the very first movie writer to interview President Hoover. Gus Edwards planning a song, "It's Getting Mighty Dark in Hollywood," because King Vidor's all-colored troupe is working on the Metro lot. Gladden James, old-time villain of the films, on his way to work with Dick Barthelmess in "Weary River." Jane Winton, Hollywood's "girl with the green eyes," telling about a producer who spelled the word "gun" over the telephone as follows: "G as in jehosaphet, u as in Europe, and n as in pneumonia."

THRILL PLAY IN FUTURE SHOWS

Opening Monday night in the Alvin, "The Silent House" will be played as the Thanksgiving week attraction in that playhouse. Matinees will be given Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) and Saturday.

"Rosalie," which, during its two years' run on Broadway, shattered box office records in the New Amsterdam Theater, comes to the Nixon Monday evening with the entire original cast of principals and dancers. Marilyn Miller and Jack Donahue are featured.

Peggy Joyce comes to the Pitt for Thanksgiving week, opening Monday night in her new play, "So This Is Love," an adaptation from the French. Matinees will be given Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) and Saturday. The engagement is for one week only.

Marjory Beebe will be seen in her first featured screen role in the Davis next week in "The Farmer's Daughter." The Upham-Whitney Revue will top the six acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville.

Eva von Berne, playing the lead feminine role in "The Masks of the Devil," next week's film in the Penn, is being presented for the first time. She is from Vienna. "Blue Revue," will be the stage feature.

Two blondes and two brunets head the romance in Alice White's "Show Girl," in the Stanley next week. Alice is blonde; so is Gwen Lee. Donald Reed and Charlie Delaney, the leading men, are both dark.

A feature in Loew's Aldine next week will be "Metro Movietone Review," an entire vaudeville show on the talking screen. A variety of acts will be presented by famous headliners, introduced by a master of ceremonies.

Jean Hersholt has a featured role in the picturization, with sound, of Anne Nichols' famous stage play, "Abie's Irish Rose," which continues in the Grand next week.

One of the scenes in "Bare Facts," next week's show in the Academy, is "Fine Feathers," the girls being costumed in feathers, presenting a riot of brilliant colors.

Charles Ray, famous screen star, will appear in person in the Harris the first half of next week in "Doing His Stuff," in which he will be assisted by Rex McGaugh. Screen features for the week will be "Man Made Woman," starring Leatrice Joy, and Olive Borden in "Sinners in Love."

"Beggars of Life," from Jim Tully's novel, is coming to the Liberty screen next week, Wallace Beery is featured.

Eric von Stroheim's "The Wedding March," opens its first run in East Liberty in the Regent today.

Josef Rosenblatt, famous Jewish cantor, will be the vaudeville feature in the Sheridan Square the first half of next week. The two screen features next week will be Janet Gaynor in "Sunrise," and Marjory Bebee in "The Farmer's Daughter."

FILLING THE EYE :-: WITH GLIMPSES :-: OF MOVIELAND

Lily Damita is shown in a moment between scenes of "The Rescue," in which she plays opposite Ronald Colman. Lily, you may remember, danced with Prince George of England when he was skylarking in Hollywood.

Anita Page, appearing in "Broadway Melody," all-talk film, is seen here getting some musical instruction from Hacio Herb Brown (with moustache), composer of "The Doll Dance," who is composing the musical score for "Broadway Melody." The finger pointer is Arthur Reed, writer of the film lyrics.

Gina Corrado, who plays Aramis in Douglas Fairbanks' "The Iron Mask," appears to be the old-time pattern of a "fast worker." This beauty was just passing by.

NEWS REELS SHOW ETNA ERUPTING

Motion pictures of Mt. Etna's fury in eruption are being shown in the current issues of the Hearst Newsreels—M-G-M News and International Newsreel.

These remarkable pictures were made for the Hearst newsreels by Umberto Romagnoli, who spent several days in the direct path of the advancing tide of molten lava and also flew in an airplane over the seething maw of Mt. Etna. Every hour Romagnoli risked his life in order to secure this amazing photographic record of this greatest of recent disasters.

One of the most amazing scenes ever photographed is contained in this picture and shows the mighty river of molten ash and rock engulfing the town of Mascali. Slowly, inexorably, the gigantic stream advances, four miles wide and 100 feet high, crushing stone buildings before it as though they were cardboard.

In other scenes great forests are levelled, the giant trees snapped like matches. Another of the most remarkable of these pictures in M-G-M News and International Newsreel shows the lava stream descending upon a viaduct, centuries old and one of the finest examples of bridge architecture in Europe. The molten stream brushes aside the magnificent structure as a giant would a toy.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel, made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Two Coming Out Parties On Social Schedule For Next Week

I'VE noticed, as you no doubt have done, one striking difference between this season and most of its recent predecessors, and that is the sparseness with which the debut parties are scattered through the weeks. If you will turn your memory back a year, I think you will recall that there was a coming-out party nearly every day during November, not to mention the ones in December.

The reason is obvious, of course, since the season started in late September instead of November, but it has surely changed the aspect of the fall and winter, from the social angle. The "peak" week was the first one in the month, when four girls were presented. The other coming out parties have been spread out so that there is usually one or perhaps, two, debuts a week.

Two such parties are scheduled for next week, one on Thanksgiving Day, when Oliveretta Sutton will make her bow, and the other on Friday, with Clara Dorothea Jenkins as the guest of honor.

Dorothea's mother, Mrs. T. Clifton Jenkins, is going to give a tea in her home, you know, to present her. Mrs. Jenkins' own aides will include Mrs. C. F. C. Arensberg, Mrs. Thomas Grant McCutcheon, Mrs. Marshall Jenkins, Mrs. J. H. Palmer, Mrs. Charles D. Marshall, Mrs. Charles D. Crabbe, Mrs. William B. Akin, Mrs. Andrew J. Ralston, Mrs. George R. Wallace, Mrs. William T. McCullough, Mrs. E. W. Locke, Mrs. Howard D. Montgomery and Mrs. William R. Furey.

Dorothea is having most of the debutantes to assist her, as well as a few other friends. The debutante aides will be Jane Allderdice, Margaret Holdship, Virginia Willock, Rebecca Follansbee, Emily Stuart, Bettie McCullough, Louise Reed, Louise Evans, Katherine Schley, Rhoda Gamble, Mary Marshall, Elizabeth Orr, Marian Stone, Helen West, Harriet Wainwright, Jane Edson, Bettie Guiler, Oliveretta Sutton, Peggie Stevenson and Janet MacGregor, while the others will be Priscilla Barnes, Florence Wainwright, Virginia Furey, Virginia Kuhn and Nancy Brown.

I TOLD you before, I believe, that Barbara Book is going to have just a matron of honor, Mrs. Walter Brooke Stabler, the former Marjorie Harbison, and a flower girl, Peggy Berger, as her attendants Monday night when she marries Dr. Burleigh Cruikshank, of Boston. Now I understand that the men of the bridal party have been announced. Dr. Cruikshank is having his brother, Paul Cruikshank, also of Boston, for his best man, and the ushers will include another brother, Harold Cruikshank, and Wilson Miller Book, Barbara's brother.

Miss Maria Dickey and John R. Dickey arrived today from Philadelphia to attend the wedding, and Mrs. Charles O. Scull, of Baltimore, who is Mrs. Book's sister, is also here.

College Club Told History of Glass

EVERY member of the College Club who heard Dr. Alexander Silverman speak yesterday afternoon felt "The Lure of Glass," the subject of his talk, which he set forth in most interesting fashion. Something of the history of this, the oldest industry in the United States, and one of the oldest in the world, was given by Dr. Silverman. It is probable that Tubal Cain, the eighth man after Adam, knew something of glass, since he was a worker in metals which give off a glass-like slag, Dr. Silverman said. Glass was made at least 3,500 years ago in Egypt and the first industrial enterprise on this continent was a glass factory established in the Colony of Virginia, he informed his hearers. He presented some amazing and informative statistics and many other bits of information that were most entertaining, such as how the various colors are produced. In one European factory there are from 2,500 to 3,000 distinct tints, he said. The University of Pittsburgh, where he is head of the department of chemistry, has one of the finest collections of glass in existence, the speaker stated. The evolution of glass was shown by means of slides and Dr. Silverman further illustrated with some beautiful specimens of the art, one of which was a very precious piece of Venetian glass by Barovier. Tea rounded out the afternoon.

Robbers made a return trip to the L. Kingsbacher and Company's store at 810 Penn avenue last night, looting the display window for the second time within two weeks.

A padded brick was thrown through the window and leather and sheepskin coats valued at $350 stolen. Last night's robbery was similar to the first offense when several hundred dollars worth of clothing was stolen.

Radio Howlings Are Blamed on Heterodyning

Those strange whistling sounds heard on the WCAE wavelength are caused by nearby stations heterodyning, according to a letter sent the Sun-Telegraph by William J. White, of 629 Monroe avenue, Bellevue. After two weeks' test Mr. White believes that the wavelength of the local station should be changed, preferably close to 500 meters where there is little interference under the new assignments.

Mildred Shaffer, of Ingomar, is much disgusted with the new arrangement. She extends an invitation to anyone receiving WCAE without interference to listen in at her home on an up-to-date set with all antenna and ground facilities. "Simply can't get WCAE. There are about six stations butting in," she wrote.

Hundreds of letters are received by the Sun-Telegraph every day. They will be introduced as evidence in the WCAE hearing before the Federal Radio Commission on Friday, December 7.

Doll Up, Dullness Flees; A Chic Hat Will Cure a Cold, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

THE saying goes that a man is as old as he feels, and a woman as young as she looks.

I'd like to add that a woman feels as good as she thinks she looks.

Her dress may cost a fortune, but if she feels it is not becoming she does not feel at all.

On the other hand, a $3 hat that looks chic will cure a cold in the head.

Shop and snap out of it, is a sure cure slogan for blues.

Doll up in a dull moment and the moment is no longer dull.

The business girl of today is as smart as she looks—and that's saying some.

Becoming clothes lighten toil and improve the temper!

Love denied seeks dangerous distractions

25 'HIT TRAIL' AT GLORY BARN

Last night was testimonial night at Glory Barn, where Evangelist John W. Sproul is conducting services daily. Suffering heart and lung trouble, Mrs. Dorothy Pfeiffer, of 616 Jackson street, told of being healed at the tabernacle.

Andrew Rolewicz, of 3212 Downing street, reported feeling much better since being anointed. Stiff limbs bothered him for years, Rolewicz said. A score of men, women and children also testified to relief obtained by prayers.

To determine if his radio station, WMBJ, has been heard in distant cities, the evangelist staged a "test program" last midnight. The concert lasted an hour.

Twenty-five persons "hit the trail" at last night's meeting and a like number were annointed by Mr. Sproul. Sunday will be Rally Day at the barn.

Doctors Rate Rheumatism Good Weather Forecaster

Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.

THREE physicians of Rochester, Minn., yesterday lent credence to the age-old belief that rheumatism is a barometer capable of forecasting weather several hours in advance.

Drs. E. B. Rentschler, Frances Vanzant and L. G. Rowntree told the Central Society for Clinical Research that they had observed a correlation between pain in rheumatism and the presence of a storm in 90 per cent of their cases over a period of years. They also said they found that sunshine affects rheumatic pains and that a surprising accuracy of weather prediction was recorded.

Dr. C. A. Mills, of Cincinnati, reported that patients suffering from adrenal malfunctioning also were affected by weather.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE GAG MAN

By NIGEL TRASK

"AND they call me the 'gag man'!" Bitter soliloquy wrapped Mr. Hank Hudgins around in folds of dark brown reflection. True, he was in a light enough spot—in fact he was in the world's brightest spot if reports are to be believed.

Mr. Hudgins sat with contemptuous disregard for his attention-compelling location and position. He was draped atop the upturned end of a huge suitcase, and this sturdy piece of baggage rested on the sidewalk directly before the uptown end of the Times building in New York City.

Broadway, bright and happy or doleful and disgusted, whirled and eddied about Mr. Hudgins without eliciting so much as a perfunctory glance. And this was doubly surprising because a few short months before Mr. Hudgins had been fascinated by this very scene.

But things had been different then. Out of the west he had come—a young Lochinvar, intent upon scaling the heights of the blase east, and particularly determined to exact tribute of that writhing serpent Broadway.

Mr. Hudgins was an artist, and a good one if his well wishers in his native Indiana town knew anything about it. When he left for New York, eager to join battle with art editors and critics alike, there had been a grand send off from Pottsville. The local journal carried his picture, the silver cornet band had been at the station, and even now, for all Mr. Hudgins knew, there was cold type in the galleys of the Pottsville Intelligencer to the effect that "Local Boy Makes Good." All that was lacking to release this grand buzzah was the expected success.

But it was not forthcoming, and this admission Mr. Hudgins made grudgingly to himself. He had come to New York, and he had fallen in love with Patty Arnold, the glorious Patty of the "Dancing Arnolds." Success had not been denied him here, for Patty returned his affection.

And then he had humped the streets trying to sell his pictures. At first his hopes were high, and he had refused to recognize defeat. But that particular situation has a habit of forcing mere mortals to take cognizance of it, and an empty wallet and slightly flat stomach finally brought Mr. Hudgins face to face with fact.

Nor was this the lowest depth of his degredations. Ten minutes before he stopped to rest a moment at Times Square he had put Patty and her sister on the train for another city. And they had left in a blaze of glory, for they were going to appear in a new and bigger revue. They had a 20-week engagement, remarkable for them, and it seemed that the laurels of success were beginning to shower down upon Patty.

And for Mr. Hudgins there was naught but failure. He was leaving the great metropolis behind. He left the heights unscaled. He was going home beaten—and he left, also, his dearest ambition—one born of his affection for Patty.

Together they had strolled along Riverside Drive, and glancing upward they had caught sight of a tower. It was high-flung, outlined against the soft evening sky, and it seemed the enchanted pinnacle of some fairy palace.

"I'd like to live in a bungalow atop that tower," Patty had said. And with the impetuosity of youth Mr. Hudgins had replied "You will!" If only he hadn't made that promise! It haunted him. He got his name, "the gag man," for his ever-ready wit. Always he had a "gag" to fit any situation. But there was no gag to fit this one, and he mourned in silence.

Mr. Hudgins took the train that night—whirled through the darkness, and crept into his home town as quietly as possible. He had been at home three days before the town woke up to the fact, and when it did the more sympathetic citizens remained discreetly silent about it.

Weeks passed. Mr. Hudgins' correspondence with Patty dragged. It dragged at his wish, for, after due reflection, he decided that he was a failure, and Patty was a success—a brilliant success, and after all . . . Finally he stopped writing.

It was a month later that he picked up a copy of a theatrical magazine, and made a sensational discovery. "Patty Arnold, of the Dancing Arnolds, Married to Bert West, Song and Dance Man," Mr. Hudgins looked at the short notice twice, read and reread it, and lapsed into cold fury.

So that was it! Patty married to a song and dance man! What humiliation! Right then and there Mr. Hudgins took a burning dislike to all song and dance men, and there were no exceptions! As a relief for his overwrought nerves he started to write an article. He had tried writing before, with moderate success, but this article was to be a complete expose of song and dance men, and it was to be hot! Mr. Hudgins knew it wouldn't sell, but he didn't care about that. He finished it, sent it away to a New York magazine, and cooled off a bit.

Three weeks later Mr. Hudgins was shocked. He received a check from the magazine and a request for "more." And he wrote more. In fact, he kept on writing, until, from his little Indiana home, he had a New York reputation. Then came a play. Mr. Hudgins had formulated the idea a long time before, and it had to do with an artist, known as "the gag man," and a song and dance man.

The play was accepted. It went into rehearsal. Mr. Hudgins couldn't get to New York until the opening night, but on that occasion he occupied a box. The curtain went up and the heroine came on. And she was Patty Arnold!

There was much explaining back stage that night. No, Patty told Mr. Hudgins, she was not married. It was her sister. The magazine had made a mistake. Yes, she still thought it would be grand to live in a bungalow atop the tower.

Looking down from the window of his new roof bungalow, Mr. Hudgins saw a lonesome figure seated on an upturned suitcase near his door. The lad looked lonesome and sad.

"I'll be back in a minute, Patty," called Mr. Hudgins as he started for the elevator. But when he reached the street the boy and the suitcase were gone.

DEATH REVEALS RUM PLANT

HANOVER, Pa., Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The accidental killing of 14-year-old Royce Messersmith, while transporting mash from a still near here, resulted in the exposure of a bootlegging syndicate and the arrest of four persons, including the boy's father.

Young Messersmith was shot and killed shortly before last midnight, while he and another boy member of the syndicate, Edward Hassler, 18, were lifting cans of used mash from the still to a truck. From the information obtained by District Attorney Herrmann, one of the cans fell on a shotgun on the seat of the truck, dislodging the trigger and firing the weapon at close range into Messersmith's head.

The district attorney found the moonshining plant with a 100-gallon still in operation on the farm when he went there to investigate the shooting.

Two men, Hassler's father, Wherley, and William Snyder, who is the reputed owner of the farm, were found on the scene and were arrested, with the Hassler youth.

ROCKET CAR SHATTERED AS EXPLOSIVE BLOWS UP

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—A new rocket car developed by Curt E. Volkhart, an engineer, exploded yesterday while being tested, Volkhart narrowly escaped injury.

The explosion came after the car had attained a speed of somewhat over 30 miles an hour. The Rocket car, the seat of which is immediately behind the front axle, started slowly with the release of the first rocket, emitting its usual dart of fire from the rear, though without the customary volume of smoke.

On the release of rockets number 6 and 7, the speed had increased to about 30 miles, but a moment later one of the rockets exploded, shattering the car's asbestos plates.

GRID SEASON REACHES CLIMAX

BIG TILTS IN EAST, WEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—They will all be there today when the gridiron grapple is renewed, whether you happen to be referring to the traditional tussle, the championship clash or the intersectional imbroglio. They are easier to identify than they are to pick on a day that brings the main battle to a decisive climax in the East, Middle West and on the Pacific Coast, while something of a lull exists in the South and Southwest.

From the spectacular viewpoint nothing else in the broad expanse of the college football world matches the color, tradition and rivalry surrounding the affairs at Berkeley and New Haven. Close to 90,000 will see California and Stanford in the "big game" on the Pacific slope. More than 75,000 will jam the bowl to see thrice-beaten Yale play twice-beaten Harvard.

The Stanford-California game is of double-barrelled interest for its traditional importance is no more vital than its effect upon the Pacific Coast Conference championship hopes of the Golden Bears, now deadlocked in the lead with Southern California. Not since the late Andy Smith was at the California helm have the Bears been contenders for the title as late in the season as this.

At least four other games claim spotlight for various but nevertheless vital reasons. Carnegie's Tartans battle to keep their unbeaten record clean against the formidable attack of New York University at Pittsburgh. Nebraska journeys to the home fort of West Point. The Navy steams out against the somewhat ferocious Tiger of Princeton in the neutral port of Philadelphia, while Wisconsin seeks to stop Minnesota and clinch the "Big Ten" title.

There is perhaps a better chance here to name favorites, for the majority of critics, if pinned down, will admit preferences for Carnegie Army, Princeton and Wisconsin. At least Old John Dope favors these four.

Nebraska, its record spotted only by a scoreless tie with Pittsburgh, still has quite a voice in any debate for National honors and will have more to say if victorious over the Cadets. They must stop Red Cagle, to do so, however, and Harvard, Yale and Notre Dame haven't found that easy.

Princeton, on the form displayed in trouncing Yale a week ago, figures to beat the Navy, but the Middies may win through the sheer fierceness of determination to offset the sting of previous disasters. If the Sailors can reproduce the form that enabled them to upset Pennsylvania a few weeks ago, it will take all the Tiger resourcefulness to stop them.

Wisconsin, if able to sustain the fast pace that has beaten Michigan, Alabama, Chicago and Iowa in succession, may take Minnesota into camp.

SKIBOS LOOK EQUAL TO HARD TASK

THOUGH the East is not without other football features today, inasmuch as Yale meets Harvard, the Army takes on Nebraska, and Princeton hooks up with the Navy, it requires no juggling of the dope to award first place on the country's entire schedule to the Carnegie Tech-New York University battle right here in Pittsburgh.

Beyond question, it is the "biggest" and most important game of the day, as not only the Eastern but possibly the national intercollegiate championship, not to mention the chance of being chosen for the Tournament of Roses game in Pasadena, will be at stake for Wally Steffen's Tartans.

Ed Hill

FOR the Plaid gridders have not yet been beaten nor tied, having come through a string of seven games against Westminster, Ashland, Thiel, W. & J., Pitt, Georgetown and Notre Dame with a perfect record, and if they can add to those conquests a victory over Chick Meehan's powerful machine in their final contest of the regular season this afternoon they cannot be denied recognition as the outstanding team of the year in the East, regardless of what Boston College may do in its remaining two events with Boston and Holy Cross.

It's a big job that confronts the Skibos, and the outcome will depend largely upon how they react to the mental strain involved. There are two possibilities. The Schenley Park athletes may either rise to the peak and play inspired football because the game means so much to them, or their playing and judgment may be harmfully affected by reason of the feeling that they "have got to win." It is not hard to see that the latter might result disastrously for Carnegie, in view of the fact that the opposing team will be under no such strain but will be favored by a care-free mood because to them the affair is merely another football game.

EVEN from a straight football viewpoint, too, the game is a tough one for the Skibos, as the Violet has a huge and capable line and also an uncommonly good backfield in Strong, Follet, O'Herin and Ed Hill, the Burgettstown boy who is particularly valuable in furnishing interference for the other ball carriers.

However, there is every ground for the confidence that the Tartans will be found equal to their task. They generally are at

TARTANS HAVE BIG INCENTIVE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

THE sun (if any) will go down at Forbes Field this evening either on the fulfillment of Carnegie Tech's hopes for a national football championship or it will set on a cruel frustration of their ambitions in the form of a defeat by New York University in the closing battle of the current gridiron campaign.

Tech enters the fray without a defeat or a tie marring its record, while Chick Meehan's Violets have lost only to Georgetown University, one of Carnegie's victims, in a battle in which they outplayed the Washington eleven by a margin that rendered the outcome a joke.

Forbes Field will be jammed for the meeting of the two strongest elevens in the East, the contest providing the solitary sell-out of seating and standing space of the season in Pittsburgh. Tech's decisive victory by a score of 27-7 over Notre Dame at South Bend last Saturday is the answer. The mob wants to see in action this eleven of young stalwarts who have been knocking all opposition kicking throughout the season, and also is keen for a final lingering glance at the marvelous generalship of Howard Harpster, the country's outstanding quarterback. It was Harpster's resourcefulness in calling for the most unexpected plays at critical moments against Notre Dame that sent Knute Rockne's Irish into an early rout.

MUST STOP STRONG

The battle today is by no means a setup, and Tech will have to be at its very best to keep its record clean. Three of the main reasons (and aren't three enough?) are to

BIG TEN GRID CROWN TO BE DECIDED

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The Western Conference football season will come to a dramatic close today with four teams fighting for a slice of championship honors, and with the game between Wisconsin and Minnesota as the key battle.

If the undefeated Wisconsin eleven succeeds in conquering Minnesota, the Badgers will come into unchallenged possession of the 1928 title, their first since 1912. If the Badgers lose, they will surrender all claims to championship consideration, because of a tie with Purdue that blots their record.

Defeat for the Badgers would then leave Illinois, Ohio State or Iowa to war over championship honors. Each of these three teams enters the last fray of the season with a defeat chalked up against it.

CARNEGIE FAVORED TO WIN

By JESS CARVER.

CARNEGIE TECH'S undefeated football varsity will attempt today to brush from its path the last remaining obstacle to an undefeated record. As matters have been going for the Tartans, this would not appear to be a very difficult task. But, as it happens, the last barrier is none other than Chick Meehan and his New York University Violets. Ho, ho, what an obstacle.

The contest comes very close to being the most important battle of the day. It may lack the mellow tradition of the Harvard-Yale struggle at New Haven, or the color that will cling to the Navy-Princeton clash at Philadelphia and the Army-Nebraska battle at New York, where the glamour of the service elevens will serve to produce a brilliant atmosphere, but for pure importance, this game, with the championship of the East at stake, and a chance for the victory to lay almost an uncontestable claim to the national crown, the affair takes the cake.

Eleventh hour predictions and statements as to the probable outcome of the tussle are so confusing that it is difficult to see a way clear to make any choice. Tech will be battling under a greater strain than the New Yorkers. The Skibos are undefeated, and therefore have the bugaboo of a clear record to fight. New York, already beaten, needs a win to protect an otherwise fine slate.

New York is here with a powerful team and an imposing record. The Violets are not undefeated—but they have rolled up a tremendous point total and have beaten back teams of the caliber of Missouri, Fordham, Colgate, Rutgers and West Virginia Wesleyan. Georgetown provided one of the chief upsets of the season by beating an over-confident and butter-fingered New York team 7-to-2, and came close to erasing once and for all the name of the Violet machine from the list of once Eastern and national title contenders.

SCOTS FAVORED

Pitted against this eleven, with its array of talent, upon which I will touch later, Pittsburgh offers its best, the resourceful and husky Tartans. With a past record of triumphs scored at the expense of Pitt, Wash-Jeff, Notre Dame and the same Georgetown eleven that "took" New York the Scots are worthy of the 10-to-7 and 10-to-8 odds that are being offered in their favor.

The Tech eleven, looking far from good, eliminated both Pitt and Wash-Jeff to first establish itself as a first rank machine. Then, under improved power, Georgetown was crushed aside and last week, playing close to perfect football the Tartans ripped and tore through the defenses of Notre Dame.

Howard Harpster is the kingpin of the local team. I think you will find him the smartest quarterback in the country—at least, he is the most alert, cool headed and resourceful that has been seen here for some years. Backed up by the battering Karcis, the all-round

Institutional League Opens Tonight

By JULIUS LEVIN.

THE Greater Pittsburgh Institutional League will open its basketball season tonight when the Young Men's Hebrew Association clashes with the makeshift North Side Community House quintet on the latter's floor.

The North Siders, last year's amateur champions, are unable to present their strongest lineup owing to a league ruling that prevents a league member from playing outside ball. Several members of the North Side team are engaged in commercial league basketball and thereby are ineligible to compete in the Institutional loop.

Coach Stansbury has made several replacements in the Community lineup, but the team is far below the caliber of that which represented the North Siders last winter. The reserves of both institutions will clash in the preliminary battle.

The South Side Falcons meet Edgewood on the Edgewood High School floor in the only game scheduled tonight in the West Penn League.

The St. Joseph's Protectory team, winner of the Catholic Lyceum League championship last winter, has next Thursday night open for a game at home. First-class teams desiding games at home and abroad write J. F. Lyons, 2010 Clark Building, or call Atlantic 0622 and ask for Joe.

The Morry Cadets, of Braddock, will play under the name of the Morry Five this season, according to an announcement today by Manager Max Berkowitz. The Morry Five is one of the teams being considered for a berth in the County League.

The Red McMahon Club will meet the Second Ward Club at South High Monday night.

Douglas vs. Pittsburgh (Homewood).
Celtics vs. Swissvale (Leslie Park).

Two games will be played in the District League today, both having more than passing interest. A local derby will be staged at the Homewood playgrounds when the Douglas boys clash with Pittsburgh soccer club.

Much rivalry exists between the clubs and a good game should ensue.

At Leslie field, Swissvale will make an effort to stop the Celtic aggregation and avenge its defeat of last Saturday. Swissvale had plenty of last Saturday's game, but could not shoot when near the goal.

TO BROADCAST GAME

Radio stations KDKA and KQV will transmit the play-by-play account of the Carnegie Tech-N. Y. U. football classic, to be played at Forbes Field, this afternoon, starting five minutes prior to the kick-off at 2 o'clock.

Buc Sextet Departs For East Tonight

By CARL W. SHATTO.

MANAGER ODIE CLEGHORN and his Pirate skaters will leave tonight for New York, starting one of their most "rocky" road trips of the season. The Rangers, world champions, are to be met at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night; on Tuesday the Bucs will battle the Bruins in Boston, and on Thursday they will continue on to Montreal to oppose Les Canadiens.

Meeting three such powerful clubs as the Rangers, Bruins and Canadiens in one week would appear to be seven days' work for any man's ice machine, but the schedule makers did not regard it as activity enough for the Bucs, for they are carded to extend the glad hand to the Chicago Black Hawks at Duquesne Garden Saturday.

The Pirates get one small "break" in that most of them are in good condition. Hib Milks pulled a tendon in the joust with the Canadiens here Thursday, but he is recovering rapidly and will start against the Rangers. Roger Smith also is nursing a leg injury, but he will be able to do relief duty should an emergency arise.

Irish to Play Pitt Eleven Next Year

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 24.—Knute Rockne, coach of the Notre Dame football team announced last night that his team would play the University of Pittsburgh next season. No date for the game will be announced until after the schedule is completed, he said.

PROTEST GRID STARS' STATUS

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 24.—When the decisions committee of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League meets this evening in the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh, they will have a protest of Beaver Falls High School against New Castle High School to consider. The Falls school intended to file a protest yesterday afternoon with that committee alleging at least two of the New Castle players to be over the legal age limit of 21 years.

Prof. Thomas T. McCord, principal of the Beaver Falls High School, could not be reached last evening, being out of town, but it was expected he would file the protest when in Pittsburgh this afternoon.

The local authorities have information in their possession which will be presented to the decision committee for action, showing that Tony Ostrosky is over 22 years of age, having been born July 11, 1906. This record of age is on file in the Junior high school at New Castle and supplemented by a record kept of births in the family of employes of the Koppel Industrial Car Equipment Company. The other boy in question is Paul Cubo, the Junior high school of New Castle record showing that he was born June 12, 1907, which also eliminates him from gridiron competition as far as high schools are concerned.

Geneva Announces Grid Schedule

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 24.—Geneva College has four home games and four abroad on its 1929 football schedule, according to announcement made yesterday by Graduate Manager A. C. Edgecombe. Allegheny, Duquesne, Grove City and Boston University will be played away and Canisius, Thiel, Waynesburg and Westminster will be met in the Reeves Stadium.

Negotiations are pending for a game on November 2 with Davis-Elkins at Wheeling and arrangements are expected to be completed within a few days.

The home season will open with Canisius playing here. The tentative lineup is as follows:

September 28—Allegheny, away.
October 5—Canisius, stadium.
October 12—Duquesne, away.
October 19—Thiel, stadium.
October 26—Grove City, away.
November 2—Open, probably Davis-Elkins, away.
November 11—Waynesburg, stadium.
November 16—Boston University away.
November 23—Westminster, stadium.

The car was badly wrecked. Some of the party continued their journey in another automobile and the others by train.

HARVARD, YALE TO BATTLE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—Yale and Harvard held their final football practices of the season yesterday afternoon in preparation for their forty-seventh gridiron encounter today in the big Yale saucer. Each team had a brief workout in the bowl and then adjourned to Freshman Field to watch the Yale and Harvard scrub teams play.

The Crimson and the Blue go into today's game on even terms. Neither team figures in any of the mythical championships this year, Harvard having dropped two games and tied one, and Yale with three defeats on the football records. Since 1875, when teams representing the two universities met for the first time, Yale has won 27 of the contests and Harvard has won 13, with six games tied. Harvard's last win was staged in 1922, and since then Yale has emerged victorious from every session except in 1925, when the teams tied.

Win, lose or tie, the continuance of Marvin A. Stevens as head coach of the Yale football team is assured by John M. Cates, director of athletics, who last night stated that there was no truth to the rumors that Stevens would step down because of the showing of the team this year. Stevens has a three-year contract with the university, and the season now drawing to a close is his first. The prospective lineup of the teams:

INCENTIVE

be found in the presence in the Violets' lineup of Ken Strong, the great running back, and Lassman and Grant, the giant tackles. If Tech can stop Strong or score early, as it did against Notre Dame, the issue will not be very much in doubt, but if it fails in these departments the tussle should be a battle to the death.

N. Y. U. will not readily go down to defeat. It sees in this game a chance to atone in one fell smack for its defeat by Georgetown. For what would be sweeter revenge than to beat the team that defeated it? The visitors' incentive is hardly less than that of Tech itself—and all Tech has at stake is a national championship, certain all-America recognition for Capt. Harpster and a bid to represent the East in the Tournament of Roses game in California on New Year's Day.

The Tartans are primed for the meeting. There is no overconfidence in their ranks because they are a slight favorite as result of victories over Pitt, which outplayed and held the vaunted Nebraska team to a scoreless tie on the latter's field last Saturday; Georgetown, conqueror of N. Y. U., and Notre Dame, victor over the Army and Navy. Coach Bob Waddell has brought the Skibos along nicely for the game, and Advisory Coach Wally Steffen added the psychological touches upon his arrival from Chicago yesterday. When it comes to the all-important matter of keying up a team mentally for an important struggle, the good judge has no superiors and few equals.

ELEVENS INTACT

The same eleven that crushed Notre Dame will face the Violets, Moorhead, who replaced Eyth after a few plays, in which the latter was injured, will be at one of the halfback positions in the starting lineup, but Eyth will be available for duty as a replacement if needed. New York also will have its regular lineup available.

The battle will be between two heavy, smooth-functioning lines and well-balanced teams, with an individual duel between Harpster and Strong as an added attraction. Karcis, the Tech fullback, also will be a mighty factor with his line plunging, great interfering and strong defensive play.

A wet and soggy gridiron will greet the noble athletes, for this has been a week of mixed snow and rain. This condition is calculated to aid the chances of Tech, which proved itself a great aggregation of mudders against Notre Dame.

Which side do I like to win? Tech, of course. Let's go! The kickoff is at 2 p. m.

ABOUT JOHN DRESHAR

John Dreshar, the Tech guard, wears glasses off the gridiron and looks anything but the sturdy athlete that he has proved himself to be all season. And he has a jersey that looks like a bricklayer's working clothes. Early in the season he found the sleeves too long and cut them off at the wrists. Since then they have shrunk until they just about reach his elbows, but he refuses to switch to a new outfit while the team is winning. Not that he's at all superstitious.

Yale and Harvard clash at New Haven today. Yeah, they're good, too.

A capacity crowd of more than 75,000 will see this battle. They're playing from force of habit. It happens once a year—like Christmas.

Each will be fighting to escape just one more defeat. Then they'll buy the papers to find out how the Carnegie Tech-N. Y. U. game came out.

They've cut the "Leland" off Leland Stanford University and now simply refer to it as Stanford. The full and complete and legal name of the institution is "Leland Stanford Junior University," but that's too long, and for commercial purposes it passes as Stanford University, located at the postoffice of Stanford University, Santa Clara county, Cal.

Give them one national championship football eleven out there, such as Tech will have after the N. Y. U. battle this afternoon, and they'll change the name to the "Glenn Warner A. C."

Crowd of 50,000 will see Stanford and California battle at Berkeley, Cal., today. Stanford has been beaten 10-0, by Southern California, which has held California to a scoreless tie. Yeah, they're good too. But you really should see Wally Steffen's Carnegie Tech team when it is hitting on all six!

Wisconsin meets Minnesota at Madison today in its final bid for the Big Ten championship and figures to win unless Coach Tubby Bierns' boys pull some hocus-pocus on the Badgers. Those Wisconsin boys are good. BO. But, then, there's Tech.

WESTINGHOUSE RETAINS CITY GRID TITLE

By TOM BIRKS.

THREE horsemen, Ormiston, Matoney and Ware, wearing the Gold and Blue of Westinghouse High, galloped over the Stadium's grass for four periods in a hectic scholastic gridiron battle yesterday, and in the end, Westinghouse had again carried off the city title, defeating South Hills High by a 19-to-0 score.

Ken Ormiston left the famous stadium behind after covering himself with glory in his last game, yet sharing that glory were Ware and Joe Matoney, for it was the teamwork of the Negro boy and Joe Matoney that helped in the scoring for Coach Burton's powerful team.

Ormiston tore the South Hills line to shreds. In the first quarter, after he had outpunted Riske of South to give the Silver Lakers the ball on the South 40-yard line, Ormiston plunged great holes in the Blue and White line. With the ball on the South 20-yard line, the arm of Ware poised in the air and straight as a bullet went the ball to Matoney, and over the line—and Westinghouse had scored its first touchdown. Burkholder missed the extra point.

South fought back hard. Peaches Pietch, Critchlow, Riske and Davis plowed the ball down the field, forward passes, line bucks and end runs taking the ball to the one-yard line. A forward pass, Riske to Currie, found the South man taking the completed pass, but he was standing out of bounds and the touchdown was not good.

Ormiston scored the second touchdown in the final period when a fake double pass made South look foolish. Ormiston calmly walked the ball over from the 15-yard line. Ken scored again later just to demonstrate the supremacy of the Silver Lake school.

South appeared better than the score would indicate. Riske, Davis, Critchlow and Pietsch compared favorably with Westinghouse in the first half, but the hard line plunging of Ormiston, Matoney and Ware could not be stopped.

Matoney was the spark plug and worked forward passes with Ware to a science. Despite the fact that Ormiston was wonderful, Matoney played a great part in the carrying of the championship again to the East End.

In other important games yesterday, Crafton High scored a 6-0 victory over Carnegie at Crafton, Clairton defeated Duquesne, 6-0, Avalon suffered a 13-0 setback at Bellevue, Latrobe gained a 47-0 decision over Derry at Latrobe and Bridgeville defeated Oakdale, 14-0, at Bridgeville. Bearows intercepted a pass and ran 45 yards for a score to win for Crafton, and Clairton's win practically assured it the Monongahela Valley title. The city title game lineup:

Appendicitis Operation Is Grid Bet

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., Nov. 24.—(AP.)—If Wisconsin loses today's game with Minnesota, Walter Vollrath, manufacturer, will lose the price of an appendicitis operation he never has had.

If Wisconsin wins, however, Vollrath will win the cash value of such an operation, and will get his operation free.

The strange situation came about in this wise:

Last Saturday Vollrath won the operation (as yet unperformed) from Dr. Walter Mathew, of Davenport, Iowa. Vollrath had bet on Wisconsin against Iowa.

Yesterday Vollrath "pyramided" his winnings in a second bet with Dr. Mathew, who picked Minnesota to beat Wisconsin.

TECH IS FAVORED TO DEFEAT VIOLETS

Letzelter and the two speed-boys, Howard Eyth and Glenn Moorhead, and with a hefty line in front of him, Harpster will make trouble for any football team.

The Tech attack is a most diversified one. Ted Rosenzweig is proving himself especially adept in carrying the ball on the hard to stop end around play. The line, once it struck its stride in the Georgetown game, has become a powerful weapon, both on the offense and the defense. Averaging 190 pounds it presents a formidable barrier to even the most pounding of running attacks, and the men are smart enough to cause trouble for any offense based on trickery.

Harpster will do the punting, the passing and very likely, no small amount of the ball toting today. It is his last collegiate game, and Harp is anxious to make it his greatest. That is an item that New York had best give some thought.

STRONG TRIPLE-THREAT

New York's attack is built principally around the clever Ken Strong, a 200 pound halfback, who runs, kicks and passes. He is the leading point scorer in the East, and has been a star in every game in which he has played this year.

With him in the backfield will be Hill, another halfback of ability who is worth especial notice for his interference leading. He has made much of Strong's success possible. O'Herin, brainy quarterback and Follett, a sturdy fullback, are slated to draw the starting assignments.

Tech has one great advantage over the Violets in that the Plaid will have Karcis, far the best fullback on the field. New York has no one who can compare with Karcis. Monaco, John and his 230 pounds of hammering, crushing bulk will put more than one bruise on the New York line this afternoon. And woe be unto the Gotham back who slips through the line and is smacked down by this star. He won't get up in a hurry—none of 'em do.

Six of the Tech regulars are playing their final games today, Harpster, Moorhead and Letzelter are the regular backs who will don their crimson jerseys for the final time this afternoon. Don Love well, Saul Meilziner and little Tony Sweet will make their last appearances as members of a Plaid line. Pete Stauffer, Harpster's understudy and Rousman, a second team end are the remaining seniors on the club.

40,000 MAY ATTEND

It the advance sale of seats is any indication of the mob that will be jammed around the ticket windows today, the first sell-out crowd of the year will be on hand. Forbes Field will accomodate about 40,000 for football, and barring a bad break in the weather, the attendance total will approach that figure.

Carnegie authorities have given out some last minute hints to the patrons which will assist mightily in checking any eleventh hour rush for seats. It will also take care of the traffic problem and the seating proposition. Here they are—read 'em:

1.—Try to be in your seat at least 15 minutes before game time.

2.—Box seat holders (all floors) and all holders of seats in the second tier use the main gate at Boquet and Sennot streets.

3.—First floor patrons, Section 1 to 7 inclusive, use Schenley Park gate.

4.—First floor patrons, Sections 8 to 10, inclusive, use Boquet street gate.

5.—First floor patrons, Sections 11 to 18, inclusive, use main gate.

6.—First floor patrons, Sections 19 to 22, use Sennott street entrance.

7.—Special right field bleacher ticket holders use main gate.

No unexpected last minute changes are looked for in either lineup. Both coaches plan to alter the combinations that have been seeing most service all year. New York will likely lineup with Barrabee and Nemecek at the ends; Capt. Lassman and Grant at the tackles; Myer and Sargisson at the guards; Schneider at center and Hill, OHerin Follett and Strong in the backfield.

DUKES BATTLE BETHANY

Tech went out of town yesterday for a final day of drill, but before the squad departed, Coach Bob Waddell indicated that he would use Rosenzweig and Sweet at the wings; Schmidt and Highberger at the tackles; Dreshar and Lovewell at the guards and Meilziner at center, with Harpster, Karcis, Letzelter and either Moorhead or Eyth in the backfield.

While Carnegie and New York are slashing at each others throats at Forbes Field, Duquesne will be entertaining the Bethany Bisons on their Bluff gridiron in a Tri-State Conference battle.

The Dukes have made an enviable record so far this year, Washington, Jeff, Westminster, Thiel, Slippery Rock, St. Thomas and Loyola have been defeated. Geneva was the lone team able to upset the Durable Dukes, and by doing so, all but clinched the league title for the fourth successive year.

Duquesne is on the long end of the wagering today. Bethany, with a husky team, has been unable to get going this fall, and has been kicked about by most of its opponents. Unless the Green clad boys show improved form today, they will find the Dukes too fast and too clever.

Both the Tech-New York game and the Duke-Bison clash will start at 2:00 p. m. SHARP.

By beating Bethany this afternoon, Duquesne can rise to a position whereby it can claim a tie for the Conference championship with Geneva should the Covenanters fall before Dyke Beede's embattled Titans of Westminster at New Wilmington today. The odds are very much against a Westminster victory—but one never can tell.

The New York U special trains, all three of 'em, arrived from Gotham this morning, bearing some 1,500 Violet students, alumni and rooters and the New York band of 75 (count 'em) pieces. The boys went into sessions of various sorts at Webster Hall, where N. Y. U. Alumni headquarters have been established.

Those of you who wax smart and get out to Forbes Field early will not want for entertainment, as both the Tartan Kiltie band and the visiting musicians will play for your benefit.

Three Chicago Ice Stars Are Injured

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—Because of injuries, the Chicago Blackhawks have recalled Val Hoffinger, defense player, from St. Louis. Thursday night's rough encounter with the New York Rangers put Bobby Burns, recruit wingman from Duluth, out of the game for at least a month with a fractured arm. Two other Hawks—Capt. Dick Irvin and Chuck Gardiner—were also injured. Irvin's cheek was gashed with a skate jab while Gardiner received a blow on the head.

LA BARBA SCORES K. O.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—(INS.)—Fidel La Barba, former king of the flyweights, today holds a knockout over Ray Ravani, Oakland bantamweight. La Barba concentrated on a body attack during the early rounds and whipped over a right cross to the chin in the eighth round to send Ravani to the floor for a count of nine. He got up but was sent down again for the count of 10 by a similar blow.

DATTO BOASTS GREAT K. O. RECORD

Johnny Datto, the Filipino featherweight, who boxes Andy Martin, of Boston, in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden Monday night, packs a real knockout punch, as is attested by his record, just forwarded by his manager, Jimmy Dunn, of Cleveland. His recent bouts include full-count victories over U. S. Carpentier and Jack McFarland, Pittsburgh district products, and Al LaRose, of Indianapolis, all at New Castle, and he holds a knockout victory in eight rounds over Pete Zivic, another Pittsburgher, scored at Columbus. He floored Zivic nine times during the bout.

Other knockout victims of the flashy Filipino include Jackie Johnston, Dick McDonie, Cecil Payne, Sailor Larsen, Jackie Nichols, Herbie Schaeffer, Eddie Siegel, Buck Fleming, Jack Duffy and a host of others.

His opponent is a rugged young Italian who has met the best in his class in the East. Martin holds victories over Benny Bass, Vic Burrone, Marty Silvers, Tony Carney, Benny Hall and Johnny Harko, among others, and has boxed draws with Chick Suggs and Carl Tremaine. Two six-round bouts and two four-rounders complete the Motor Square card.

BIG TEN

but each has an outside chance for the title. Illinois and Ohio State will collide at Champaign, with Iowa meeting Michigan at Ann Arbor. If the Wolverines should down the Hawkeyes, Iowa will fade out of the championship picture, with the Illinois-Ohio State battle producing a champion.

The situation allows several solutions of the championship problem. If Minnesota defeats Wisconsin, and Ohio State and Illinois should tie, the Hawkeyes, if victorious over Michigan, would emerge with championship honors.

RECORD ATTENDANCE

Today's games promise to set a Big Ten attendance record with upwards of 225,000 viewing the five battles. At Lafayette, Ind., Purdue meets its traditional enemy, Indiana, with Northwestern entertaining Dartmouth at Evanston, in the other games.

The Wisconsin-Minnesota struggle to be played at Madison will attract a capacity crowd of 43,000, with the odds slightly favoring the Badgers.

By a strange coincidence it was a Minnesota eleven that blocked Wisconsin's path to a championship 16 years ago in the final game of the season. On the eve of their combat in 1912, Wisconsin needed only to triumph over Minnesota, but the Gophers won, 14 to 0.

MAROONS ELECT KELLY

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—John (Pat) Kelly of Chicago was elected captain of the 1929 University of Chicago football team yesterday. Kelly, a junior, won his first letter this year, playing end, where he was one of the mainstays on Chicago's weak team.

PITFIELD WINS

George Pitfield, of Dimling's, scored his first victory in five starts in the local Three-Cushion Billiard League when he defeated Joe Mackin of Clarke's at Dimling's last night, 40 to 15.

At Halifax, N. S.—Jack Humbeck and Roy Mitchell drew, 10 rounds.

At Toledo—Carl Tremaine defeated Phil O'Dowd, 10 rounds; Eddie O'Dowd defeated Billy Evans, 10 rounds; Happy Atherton defeated Jackie Powers, 10 rounds.

At Erie—Canada Lee defeated Larry Brignolia, 10 rounds; Johnny Glynn defeated George O'Brien, 6 rounds; Young Jack Dempsey defeated Joe Dudas, 4 rounds; Jimmy Hogan defeated Billy Palmer, 4 rounds; Joe Corelli and Tommy Maiacco drew, 4 rounds.

LONG'S SPORT COMMENT

their best in their hardest games, and under the smart leadership of Capt. Harpster their is little danger of their playing the wrong kind of game against their formidable opponents. With everything considered, it looks as if Chick Meehan will leave town still holding his record of never having won a game away from home since he took charge of N. Y. U.

Eddie Collins

THE impression that Eddie Collins is slated to become manager of the Athletics if Connie Mack ever decides to retire is stronger than ever in baseball circles since Eddie turned down a couple of good minor league managerial offers. On top of the report that Eddie could have had the Baltimore job, it is learned that the Newark club also wanted him before Tris Speaker was signed, and that the salary terms tendered were better than the veteran now receives in Philadelphia. The fact that Collins rejected both propositions is taken to mean that there is an understanding in the Quaker City whereby he will eventually succeed Mack as field director of the A's. Color is given to this by a recent statement on the part of Mack himself, who said in denying reports that Eddie might seek a transfer to another club: "Collins knows that his future is in Philadelphia."

INFORMATION from sources close to the powers on the Chicago National League Club bear out the reports circulated at the time of Rogers Hornsby's signing that the star swatsmith affixed his signature not only to a regulation baseball contract but also to a pledge to keep himself free from any betting entanglements.

According to rumor, Hornsby has agreed not to enter any gambling places, associate with any gambler, bet on horse races not even enter race tracks as a mere spectator. This pledge, it is said, was insisted upon before the Cub owners would consent to close the big deal for the purchase of the high-priced sticker from the Braves.

THERE were two reasons for the pledge. First, of course, the Bruin chiefs desired to keep baseball as free as possible from contact with any element that might be suggestive of gambling, and in the second place they figured that Hornsby would be able to play better ball if made to give up the habit of laying bets on various sport events.

It was admitted that Hornsby is a thoroughly sincere ball player, regardless of his reported betting inclinations off the field, but it was the view of his new employers that he would be able to give even better service than usual if kept out of danger of any gambling worries.

Sam Dreyfuss

WHEN the minor baseball leagues of the country hold their annual convention in Toronto, Ont., one week from next Monday, Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss will be on hand as the representative of the Pittsburgh club, but it was denied at Pirate headquarters yesterday that Sam's scheduled trip has any significance. The Buccaneer bosses say they have no deals in prospect with any major or minor league moguls who will be present at the Canadian confab, and that the younger Dreyfuss will be in attendance merely on the chance that something of interest to the Pittsburgh club might develop. Manager Donie Bush will return to his Indianapolis home next week from Florida, but he has sent no word to the local office as to whether or not he plans to attend the Toronto meeting. Evidently the Corsair management does not intend to make any trade moves before the National League magnates gather in New York on December 10.

PLAYING basketball according to girls' rules may suit the average feminine floor organization, but in the Colonial Maids Philadelphia has a team that will have none of it. This team has played men's rules for several years, and after a recent test game under the girls' code has made haste to readopt its favorite style.

The Colonial Girls announce that hereafter they will play sterner sex rules and nothing but. An onlooker at one of their games reports that holding, tripping, taking a player out, blocking, clever dribbling and cutting for the basket are things that these lassies can do with surprising adeptness, some of the shots arch into the basket making the spectators marvel at their skill.

THERE is a considerable difference between men's rules and the girls' code in basketball. Only five players are used in men's teams, but under girls' rules a team consists of six. There are two guards, two centers and two forwards.

Under girls' rules, the forwards are the only ones allowed to shoot at the basket. The playing space is divideed into three zones, and the players have to stay "put" in their one-third sections. A forward may shoot, but a center must stay in the middle zone, sending the ball to the forwards; the guards' duty is only to try to prevent the rival forwards from scoring by intercepting the ball and throwing it to the two center players, who in turn pass it to their forwards.

Ted Meredith

ONE of the greatest runners of all time has come back to track and field sports as a coach in the person of James E. (Ted) Meredith. He has been appointed assistant to Lawson Robertson as track and cross-country coach at the University of Pennsylvania, the first time that Robertson has had an aide. A dozen years ago, Meredith ranked as the greatest middle distance runner in the world. Even as a schoolboy in 1912, he won the Olympic 800 meters, defeating a field that included Mel Sheppard and other star half-milers. In his four years at Penn, starting in 1913, he won intercollegiate and national championships several times at the quarter and the half. He set a world's record for 440 yards around one turn that still stands, 47 2-5 seconds, and on a straightaway course did the distance in 47 flat, though the record was never allowed because there was a wind at his back. Twice he broke the world's half-mile record, but his own figures have since been lowered by other runners.

Sharkey May Meet Dempsey Next Year

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—(INS.)—Tex Rickard announces that Jack Sharkey, who has signed for three bouts to be held here during the winter under Rickardian auspices, will be pitted against Jack Dempsey in late spring or early summer of next year if he wins the three preliminary bouts and the former heavyweight champion decides to return to the squared circle.

The promoter said he would choose Sharkey's opponents for the three bouts from among Johnny Risko, Paulino, Tom Heeney, Knute Hansen and Young Stribling. Sharkey will warm up for his winter's work by boxing Arthur De Kuh, Brooklyn Italian, December 10, in his home town, Boston.

State Alumni Cards Meeting Next Week

The annual pep meeting and smoker of the Pennsylvania State College Alumni of the Pittsburgh district will be held in Kaufmann's Auditorium on Thanksgiving eve. Elaborate plans are being rabidly completed to make this the banner event of the alumni of this district. Many of the stars of former years, who have brought fame to Penn State on the gridiron and in athletics in general, will be on hand to help instill pep for the annual battle of the Nittany Lions and the Pitt Panthers.

Pittsburghers Win Bridge Crown

CLEVELAND, Nov. 24.—(AP.)—The women's bridge team championship of the United States was won by Miss Marie Kevern and Mrs. C. W. Nokes, of Cleveland, and Mrs. H. D. Stahl and Miss Margaret Beech, of Pittsburgh. The deciding game was played at the second annual convention of the American Auction Bridge League in session here.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

BY HAVEY J. BOYLE

BECAUSE this is the biggest football day of this year in Pittsburgh, with Carnegie Tech meeting New York University, and with some 40,000 men and women turning out for the game, Pittsburgh reaches the peak of its metropolitan aspect. All Western Pennsylvania is represented in the crowds downtown, prior to the game, and quite a few of them make ready to make boom-boom after the game in the few cabarets of the town.

The boom-boom boys and girls will find conditions in Pittsburgh a little tighter than usual. The various probes into charges that there has been some illicit selling of liquor here and there has made the proprietors of the giggling water places ever so cautious. Only steady customers are permitted to enter the dingy portals of the speakeasies and at the present moment our spy (T-84) reports fewer soft-talkies in town than in any period since the great draught came along.

THE proprietors themselves are disconsolate. Business is not good even in the few places that are running. Some of the neighborhood filling stations report a fair run on moonshine at two for a quarter, but in the places where the so-called real stuff is sold at 50 cents a pop there has been a falling off.

One caterer reports that if it wasn't for his desire to serve as a convenience to old customers he would tender his portfolio and withdraw for a winter's nap.

One of the best contrasts afforded to persons interested in such things is offered in the approach to Pittsburgh from the east on the Pennsylvania Railroad. Whether railroads purposely select horrible back alleys through which to come into a city or whether the railroads create the condition, the fact remains that between Shadyside and the Pennsylvania Station there is presented the most dismal scene of dilapidation imaginable. Tenements standing perilously askew, litter of washtubs, old barrels, and windows stuffed with pillows, greet the eye.

After riding through all this the visitor steps off the train, walks out of the Pennsylvania Station and comes upon the most recent contribution to the architectural beauty of the town—the Koppers' Building. It always strikes us as something akin to "From Rags to Riches."

The scene of poverty-stricken desolation which spreads out in some places contiguous to our city limits prompted a writer, H. L. Mencken, to grow quite pessimistic. It was pretty nearly the last straw for Mr. Mencken, but not quite. A few weeks later something else had gone awry. But when he was at it he gave our town a pretty good slaming around.

* * *

THERE comes an invitation and a complimentary ticket to a dance. Do people still dance? We gave up dancing about a year after we got the piano. Those were the days when the giggling girls used to brag they hadn't missed a dance at the euchre and reception given by the local order of Owls. Dancing then was from 8 to 2 and gents were admitted for 50 cents and ladies for 25. On warm evenings the boys used to drape their handkerchiefs around their collars. A "piker" was a term to denote an extremist in the art. Nearly always the "pikers" were the best dancers. My, my how the years have rolled along.

PARK GROUNDS OFFERED TO EDGEWORTH

An offer has been made to the Edgeworth Borough council by the Pittsburgh Coal Company for the purchase of eight acres of ground, owned by the coal company, for park purposes.

The price for the acreage has been set at $12,500. The land is the southern ravine section of Edgeworth, adjoining the Swissvale Borough line. A certain part of the land lies within the Borough of Swissvale and if the ground is purchased by Edgeworth the borough line would have to be changed.

The matter of the purchase is being looked on with favor by the Edgewood council and negotiations have been opened with the Swissvale council with a view to adjusting the borough boundary lines. If both councils can come to an understanding with reference to the boundary line the prospects for the purchase look bright as the people of Edgewood feel disposed to have sufficient appropriation made for the park's upkeep should the land be purchased.

Will Rogers Says

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.

Today, Saturday, minds are not on politics. They are not on national affairs—they are on football.

Did you know that football is becoming about as big a nuisance as politics? Millions of football fans are going to football games this afternoon.

Mind you, I think it's a great thing. You spend all these years playing football and then you go through life waiting for somebody to give you a signal.

Harvard and Yale have been beaten by everything but the pages in Congress. They play today to determine which is the worst team in America. I think it will be a tie.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

The Parrot Fish Not a Myth

THE parrot fish, or parrot wrasse, is not a myth as is generally supposed. It is found in tropical waters and is so called because of its bright colors and queerly shaped mouth, the jaws forming a strong and sharp "beak."

Fingerprint Identification Not Modern Idea

STOLEN LOVE

Bill Embraces Joan After Coming to Her Rescue As the Story Ends

AND then at sight of her startled face, he jumped up and put both arms around her, kissing her closed eyes, her trembling hands with which she tried to cover her face. "You mustn't mind me, Johnnie—nervous—don't mean anything—mustn't mind . . ."

She slipped out of his arms. "It's all right. I know you didn't mean it. I'll start dinner then—"

"I'll help—"

"No. I'd rather do it alone. You can set the table if you like."

In the kitchen she wiped her lips where he had touched them. Scrubbed her face with the blue checked kitchen apron. Two bitter tears dropped into the sizzling bacon in the frying pan. She didn't cry because he had been cross. That didn't matter. It didn't matter that he had lied about the starting time.

She cried because he had kissed her, and she had wiped the kiss away. "It's come to that," she thought, despairingly. "I—I don't want him to touch me any more. It's nerves, of course. It must be. We're both nervous—he's so different it makes me different. I'll get over it. I'll make myself . . . he mustn't know . . . mustn't ever guess . . ."

At dinner she was sparkling, almost boisterous. "Isn't it fun to be all alone, just you and I—so Mr. and Mrs.! I'll bet you don't like the way I fried the chops—they are a little burnt in spots—it's a good thing we're going to have a cook—but the coffee is perfect—have some more coffee—what a gorgeous fire you made. Isn't it lovely they're so late?"

And he laughed a great deal, and drank three cups of coffee. He couldn't eat. He felt her inner excitement. "She knows," he thought. "Taking it sanely, enough." His pulses raced. He reached across the table and took her hands in his. "Glad they didn't come? Glad, dear?"

She wriggled free. "Yes, of course. It was nice. Let's go and sit by the fire."

She jumped up and he followed, studying her averted face, her beautiful, clean cut profile.

"It has grown so dark," she said, timidly. "Aren't you afraid?" "of the dark?"

"Of the roads—you said they were dangerous after dark."

"Oh—the roads. Oh, they'll be all right. Don't worry." He smiled and pulled her onto his lap. "You sit there like a good child, and leave the worrying to me."

The logs blazed, the shaded lamps glowed warmly in the big rustic room. The smoke from his cigar rose comfortably in the pleasant, cedar-scented air. He began to relax, to rest at ease.

Joan sat tense and quiet, listening . . . listening. . . .

"It's so late," she cried suddenly, breaking the long silence. "I'm afraid—I think we ought to go back and look for them. They may have missed the road—"

"Nonsense—they're all right. Don't worry about them."

"But I think—" She struggled to free herself from his encircling arms.

The arm tightened about her like a vice.

He could feel her heart beating frantically, fast as a frightened bird's. "Don't be so panicky," he smiled, but his lips were stiff and dry. She made him so nervous, with her white, pitiful face. Why couldn't she be sensible? She'd spoil everything yet.

"I can't help it. It's late. I'm afraid something has happened . . . There was a landslide back on the road—"

He was suddenly tired of pretending. "You know they aren't on the road," he said shortly.

She had stopped struggling. He felt her, cold and rigid in his grasp. "They—aren't on the road? Mrs. Barstow isn't coming?"

"You know she isn't."

"Oh—"

"I just said that, just a little story, to get you to come. I had to say something, you're such a funny little thing—aren't you?"

"Aren't I?" She stared at him with wide, uncomprehending eyes. "Because I wouldn't have come without them? is that funny? I don't think it is. I don't understand you, Curtis—why, this is an insane thing to do! We can't stay here, that's all. We'll have to go right away. I don't know what you were thinking of—"

"We aren't going to leave. We're going to stay—that's flat."

"But we can't—why it's impossible. I'm going back. You can do as you like!" She ran into the kitchen and snatched her hat and coat from the table.

He followed, slipped his arms around her. "Don't be angry, Johnnie! Drop that coat—listen to me, Joan!" She heard the murmur of his words, close to her ear. Heard them stupidly at first, then with a dawning realization of what he meant, what he was saying, why he had brought her here. But surely Curtis—Curtis whom she was going to marry in a few weeks—he couldn't mean it—she was light-headed. It was some ghastly kind of joke—

With a convulsive movement she wrenched herself from his arms, turned so that she could look up into his face.

And then she knew. All the months of sweetness and consideration, all of the fuss and pomp of their formal engagement, everything crumpled and gone—into this.

Her lips twitched, she couldn't find any words to say, the floor seemed to be sinking under her feet. She hid her face on his arm, to hide its twisting naked shame. So this was what she meant to Curtis . . . this was all she could mean to anyone who knew—about Bill. All the struggle to work up, to make a place for herself in the world. All the patient nights of study, all the days of work in Francine's shop—everything—gone—nothing left.

"I might have known," she said finally, in a small strangled voice, "I shouldn't have expected—anything different—"

She never knew how long she stood in the dim, smoky kitchen of the cabin, clinging to him to keep from falling. Clinging to him as she would to a post, or a chair or a tree. After a long time the roaring in her ears lessened, she began to hear his voice again, his murmured endearments, to be conscious of his caresses, big slow, impassioned kisses. With a little shuddering cry of disgust she pushed him from her. "Don't touch me—don't ever touch me—again"——

Even when he lunged toward her, his face distorted with anger and outraged pride, she wasn't afraid. "Don't!" she said sharply. "Don't touch me, Curtis!"

"So that's it. Never loved me, eh? Just out for a fat meal ticket—that was it. Circus wedding, place in the world . . . And when that isn't in sight it's 'Don't touch me, Curtis!'. Oh, what a fool I've been . . . Well—that's over. I'm through with your cute, coy ways. They won't get you anything. Do you understand? You're here now—you're going to stay. Put down that coat—put it down!"

They faced each other, hatred in their eyes. Her hand tightened on the big, plaid coat. "Going to keep me here against my will—is that it? Go on—tell me—we may as well get it straight—"

"I didn't say that." He licked his lips. "That is I hope it won't be necessary. You're hardly fool enough to try to walk home from the party when it's a matter of a hundred miles—and it isn't your first party—"

Joan began to laugh then, brokenly. "So that's the idea," she said, between gasps of ugly, choking laughing. "I'm used to this sort of thing, because—because I loved a boy. A long time ago. It's so funny—I can't help laughing. But I shouldn't think you'd want me—if you feel that way about it. You ought to be ashamed of yourself—k-kissing a girl like me. You really should. What would people say!" Her words ended in a shriek of high-pitched, hysterical laughter that suddenly changed into sobs, tearing, devastating sobs that shook her slight body pitifully.

"There's nothing to cry about," he said doggedly.

"Nothing to cry about—when the man you are going to marry acts like a cheap villian out of a play—Oh, Curtis! Curtis!"

He could hear her sobbing breath, her piteous, gulping sobs. She was so small and white and broken. He couldn't stand it—

"Don't," he cried, and tried to take her into his arms, to reason with her, to make her see—

But Joan was past reason, past comforting now. She only knew that he was embracing her again, that she couldn't talk him out of it. With a strength that equalled his for the moment she fought against him, broke from his arms, and ran, still sobbing, out of the door, down the steep steps into the dark.

"Wait!" he cried. "Wait—Joan!"

She could hear him plunging after her. Rocks and clods of dirt dislodged by his feet came rolling down on her. She stumbled on, half running, half sliding down the narrow trail. The wet branches of the pine whipped her face, the thick undergrowth impeded the way. A tree struck her and she sobbed because he was gaining. She could hear his panting breath above the steady patter of the rain, and the whimpering of the wind in the trees.

And suddenly she saw the highway below. With a last desperate effort she tore through the brush, and slipped, bruised but uninjured down the muddy bank to the road. For the fraction of a minute she paused—which way to go—which way? "Joan — damn you—stop!" He was right behind her. She couldn't get away.

Faster her feet flew, faster and faster. It was easy going on the smooth road. Keep going, just a little longer . . . he'd have to stop soon, his breath must be almost gone too . . . just a little longer . . . and she'd be safe . . . safe . . .

She might have got away, Curtis was really losing ground, but the chuck hole near a big pine was her undoing. Her foot caught in it, she fell heavily, with a faint, despairing cry on her lips. Before she could get to her feet again his arms had closed about her. All her strength was gone, she could no longer struggle. She shut her eyes.

Perhaps the sound of the wind and the rain drowned out the sound of the car bearing down on them from the curve. Neither Joan nor Curtis heard it till the glare of its lights was upon them, silhouetting their straining bodies sharply against the trees.

The brakes screamed. A man leaped from the car, unnaturally tall in the blinding white light. His arm shot out. There was a soft, smacking sound. The sound of flesh against flesh. Curtis crumpled into the mud of the road.

The man reached out his arms to Joan. "I've been so long coming—I missed the way so many times—"

She leaned against a wheel of the car, staring at him, pushing the tangled hair out of her eyes, staring . . .

"Bill—you've come back to me—"

"Joan—it's been so long—"

She went into his arms with a little whimpering cry.

THE END.

HAPPINESS INSURANCE -:- -:- -:-

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

HAPPINESS insurance! The Eternal Triangle! No, not the kind of triangle that has made lurid literature and innumerable heartaches through the ages. I mean the triangle that is builded on Love. The triangle in which King Baby reigns supreme over two adoring people. That's the happiness insurance and the triangle I'm writing about today.

For a Baby is the surest insurer of happiness that can be imagined. What dreams and hopes and longings two people have who are absorbed in mutual adoration of Baby. Dreams of him as a sturdy youngster when he takes his first laughing step. Hopes for him as an athletic schoolboy, leading his classes. Proud imaginings of his college days when he will be the hero of his team. And sweet, dim dreams of his first sweetheart days, when he shyly brings The Girl home to Mother and Dad.

Can you find in your heart any more sure recipe for happiness than this? Of course you can't!

And through it all runs the thread of self sacrifice that Their boy will have everything they can possibly give him. That the happiness which is theirs shall be passed on to the much loved Sonny.

That's insurance in which everybody should take out a policy. It is a policy of big returns and ample dividends; an endowment policy that brings rich returns for life. For what greater return can we ask of life than Love and Happiness!

A Continuation of Love's Embers

Madge Fumbles With the Tangled Threads of Life

FOR several seconds after Katherine finished, I felt as if the air were vibrant with the echo of her cry: "I don't want you to make the mistake I made." I knew that she never would have spoken of the marital tragedy which was hers had she not felt it her duty and her opportunity to warn me of the error she felt I was in danger of making. And I in turn felt my own problems fade into comparative insignificance as I realized again what a thorny path her patient feet were treading.

It was a path upon which she asked no assistance, however. She rarely spoke of her husband, absent upon an interminable expedition into the wilds of South America, from which he would not return for many months. But I feared that Jack Bickett's sternness, his objections to her working at her profession while he was absent upon trips which he either could not or would not let her share, and his jealousy had at last destroyed the wonderful devotion which had been Katherine's and which had dragged her husband back from death.

And Hal Meredith, brilliant alienist, playfellow, almost lover of her youth, was always in the background, waiting, as he had been ever since the suicide of his half insane and wholly evil wife, Lucia, set him free!

That my little kinswoman received occasional letters from Dr. Meredith I knew, but I had no knowledge of their contents from her. But it was easy to conjecture that they were impassioned appeals to make the decision which would bring him hurrying home to her. Always the receipt of one of those heavy envelopes heralded days of depression for Katherine, during which I guessed she fought anew a battle which had begun at the tragedy which was Lucia Meredith's death.

Sometimes I puzzled over the fact that my sympathies were all enlisted in the cause of the brilliant alienist, when according to convention and the ties of blood, Jack Bickett should have received all my allegiance. Indeed, I often felt that I was guilty of treachery to my cousin, nearest of kin to my dead mother, in my feeling that he was far less fitted to make her happy than was Hal Meredith, and that he less deserved her love. But I could not control my emotional reaction to Katherine's problem, although I was careful never to let her guess that I gave it any thought.

But Katherine is highly psychic and when she rose suddenly to her feet after her significant confidence, I knew that she had read my thoughts, sensed my attitude toward her problem and wished to get away from both immediately lest they influence her.

"I shouldn't have said that to you," she said remorsefully. "After all, each of us has to solve her own problem alone. Just forget I said anything except 'au revoir.'"

She turned away up the hill, giving me no chance to reply. But I knew that her regret at having spoken though vaguely of her marital tragedy, included a fear that I might feel impelled to use the confidence as an excuse to plead Hal Meredith's cause.

With the centuries-worn feeling that Life was a skein in which most of the threads were inextricably tangled, I walked back toward the house. As I neared the kitchen, Katie dashed out of the door, and when she saw me, made her hands into a trumpet and called "Telephone!" in tones which I am sure Mrs. Ticer at the next house across the fields could have heard. I quickened my steps and when I reached the steps, Katie amplified her information.

"It's a long distance, dot girl says, from New York, and nobody else but you or Meester Graham vill do. I tell her you shoost outside and she say get you to phone, before she puts oder party on."

"Oh! a particular person called," I commented, hurrying through the kitchen. "Did she say who it was?"

"She say, but I no understand dot poor feesh," Katie returned witheringly, but I already had answered my own question. There was no one in New York who would call for either Dicky or me on the same call except the woman whose voice I heard when Central completed the connection—Edith Fairfax.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Eggs at Breakfast

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

At a breakfast where the menu consists of fruit juice, cooked cereal, boiled eggs, toast and coffee, are the following details of service correct? When the guests reach the table, they find breakfast plates set at their places, with a breakfast fork (dessert size) to the left, and to the right a breakfast knife with two teaspoons. I do not have coffee spoons, but shall have soon. Should this spoon be placed to the right or to the left of the teaspoon used for the cereal? Since the coffee at breakfast is usually liked with cereal, I do not know which spoon should be placed to the extreme right. As soon as the guests are seated, the fruit juice is served in a glass of goblet-like design, but only about half as large as the one used for water. This glass is placed on a dish exactly like the ones used for bread and butter plates at luncheon, the goblet with its little dish being placed on the breakfast plate.

When the guests have finished the fruit juice, the goblet and the small dish are removed, and the cereal in a small round bowl, sitting in a dish exactly like the one used under the fruit juice, is placed on the breakfast plate. When this course is finished, the three dishes are removed, and a hot breakfast plate immediately placed in front of each guest. Toast is made at the table, as is the coffee, and eggs are brought in from the kitchen. In what should the eggs be served? Where the hostess does all her own serving, may they be placed on the table in a large dish and passed? If one does not have special dishes for them, may they be opened on the service plate, and if so, what does one do with the shells? If this is not permissible, what type dish should one have for them, and how serve them?

If one has a tray for the percolator, do the cream and pitcher and sugar dish sit on that, and, after the coffee is served, are they then passed to the guests, service going to the left of the hostess, provided no one guest is to be honored more than another?

D.

YOUR service of breakfast is extremely well arranged. The table is set correctly—with the breakfast plate already placed, the breakfast fork to the left of the plate, and the breakfast knife and two teaspoons at the right, the knife being nearer the plate.

Since, even if the coffee is served with the cereal, the eating of the cereal will probably begin first. I think it would be reasonable to place the coffee spoon, when you have the "specialized" ones, nearer the plate. Or the hostess may have a group of coffee spoons with her coffee service, and, as she serves the coffee, she may place the coffee spoon on the saucer.

Your service of the fruit juice is perfect—I like, too, the glasses that are half the size of a goblet but of that type, for they are decorative and easy to use. And it should be placed as you place it, with the small background plate. The cereal service also is correct. And correct too, is the removal of the three dishes, the two under plates and the cereal dish—after this course.

But about the service of the eggs. So strong is the reaction of families about the type of dish in which their eggs are to be served that I suggest consulting your family about this. Some people wouldn't consider serving eggs in anything but an egg cup—consider our conservative English cousins—while others abhor egg cups and won't use them under any conditions.

Usually we Americans like a compromise dish. A generous short wide glass made for this purpose is now very popular—and inexpensive. Or a deep sauce dish of some kind is usually convenient. You will find in china or glass, several varieties and sizes that will, I am sure, appeal to you as convenient.

But don't, I pray you, encourage the custom of breaking them on the shallow breakfast plate. The "spreading" quality of eggs is too much for this, and they are then too messy to eat decorously! Get a more "enclosing" dish than this.

Usually—and delightfully convenient too—when the hostess serves the coffee at table she asks each guest how she or he "takes" the coffee, and she, the hostess, prepares it according to these suggestions. This is much better than having the cream and sugar poured. As a matter of fact, the coffee accompaniments should be put into the cups before the coffee is poured into the cups.

By the way, I think you are inclined to miscall the name of the plates. A service plate is the plate that is used only as a decorative background for other plates. We do not eat anything from a service plate. Other names for a service plate are "place plate," "cover plate," even "lay plate."

The plate from which we eat the main course at dinner is called the dinner plate, and the plate from which we eat the main course of luncheon is called the luncheon plate, and the plate from which we eat the main course of breakfast is called the breakfast plate.

Sayings of Mrs. Solomon

By HELEN ROWLAND

When Bachelors Repent

NOW, my daughter, when my years were few and my illusions many, there came unto me a youth who scoffed at my wisdom, saying:

* * *

"Wherefore, oh, woman, dost thou adjure men to marry? For thou knowest in thine heart that thou baitest them for their own undoing!"

* * *

"Behold, I am a bachelor, unrepentant—but NOT 'to beautiful to kill!' Yet, for my single blessedness I offer no apology.

HELEN ROWLAND

"For lo, have I not all the comforts of a sweet home life—at HALF the expense? Yea, verily, even three good meals a day and a bachelor flat, which overfloweth with cushions and ash trays and photographs, and the burnt offerings of many damsels!

* * *

"Moreover, in the summer I can go forth in mine own sport car into the wilderness, without having to pawn mine overcoat. And in the winter I can go unto my club without having to perjure my soul.

* * *

"Verily, verily, my life is like unto a seven-course dinner. For on Monday, I may find inspiration with a high-browed damsel; and on Tuesday, I may enjoy dalliance with a vamp; and on Wednesday I may dance with the flappers—and variety is my portion.

* * *

"But a married man must talk domestic economy every day and enjoy kissing the SAME woman—every evening of his life!

* * *

"And my one fear is not that I shall die a bachelor, but that I shall awake from this DREAM!"

* * *

And I said, "Even so, my Son, even SO!"

* * *

But it came to pass, in time, that the hairs dropped, one by one, from the head of the bachelor, until his forehead shone as the arclight. And from much good eating and drinking and a life without WORRIES, he waxed round and pudgy, and his chins increased.

* * *

And lo, the flappers who had once rejoiced in his dancing, now tittered at his approach; and the maidens who had once thrilled at his glance, now yawned behind their hands at his ardor. For his "line" was of an ancient vintage. And he that had once done his courting in a flivver, now found that it required a limousine and orchids to make a fat man fascinating!

* * *

Then he came unto me, saying, "At last, would I marry and settle down. For variety hath become monotony unto me. But how shall I choose a wife!"

* * *

And I answered him, saying: "My Son, for the eligible man, there are always good fish in the sea—but peradventure the BAIT hath grown stale. Therefore, I adjure thee, tarry not, but wed ANY woman who will have thee! For the buds of the nation are not collecting antiques! And he that refuseth the loaf of Love in his youth, must later content himself with the crumbs. For no man can live all his days without LOVE! And a man without a wife is as a left-hand glove without a mate." SELAH.

For the Lovelorn

M. S.

DEAR MISS GALE:

There is a certain young lady, whom I think I love. I envy the people with whom she associates. There is a certain young fellow who occupies quite a bit of her time. The man fears to lose her. She is uncertain whom she loves. Miss Gale, please give me your advice as how to win her.

M. S.

Be attentive, generous and thoughtful, and she will like you. As for winning her love, that is up to you entirely. Let her know that you are always there for her to turn to for advice and love, and she will probably learn to care for you.

How to Keep Well

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

Bolting Food Is a Dangerous Practice

THERE are many symptoms which may be laid at the door of indigestion. Heartburn, pain the the stomach, diarrhea and other uncomfortable symptoms may be included. There is another symptom, however, and a very disagreeable one when it occurs. I refer to hiccough.

DR. COPELAND

This is not a common symptom of indigestion, of course, for most of us, but there are people who have hiccoughs upon the slightest provocation. They have to be extremely careful about what they eat and how they eat.

Almost always this symptom is due to eating too much or too rapidly. To drink a large quantity of water, gulping it down rapidly, may by followed by hiccoughs.

Nothing is more important than teaching a child how to eat. Hasty eating is one of the greatest faults of the American people. In Europe the meal is a sort of ceremony. It is carried on with great deliberation and dignity. With us, however, there are so many things to do in the 24 hours that it seems a waste of time to have to eat. At least, that is the way we act when we are at the table.

Everybody should know how harmful it is to bolt the food. For young and old, hasty eating is a crime against health.

If a baby takes its milk too rapidly it may swallow a lot of air with the food. This produces so much distension in the stomach as to cause hiccough.

I don't want to bore you with this subject, but I do want to make clear that indigestion is the most common of disabilities of all ages. What we eat and how we eat determines whether we are to have indigestion or not. When we consider the manner of eating, there can be no doubt that hasty eating has much to do with our unhappiness. It is a great factor in the production of indigestion and dyspepsia.

Swallowing a small piece of ice is likely to be helpful. The popular prescription for hiccough is to advise holding the breath. This does help in a lot of cases.

If the physician is called upon to treat an obstinate case of hiccoughs, he is likely to have the patient open the mouth while he catches hold of the tongue in a towel and pulls it forward. This may give relief.

My favorite way of controlling hiccoughs is to have the sufferer lie on his back and draw up his knees enough to relax the abdominal walls. Then, pressing the fingers into the muscles of the abdomen just below the ribs and holding them firmly, may cause a disappearance of hiccoughs.

In some cases it may be necessary to give an emetic to make the symptoms disappear. When the stomach is emptied, the symptom is forgotten. For this purpose a cup of lukewarm water with a tablespoonful of baking soda may produce the desired result.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast shows a sudden and radical upheaval or change, probably involving travel or change of environment. And while this unexpected visitation may open up many avenues of advantage and adventure, yet the way seems beset with snares and misunderstandings unless a sharp look out be kept against deception, fraud or misrepresentation. Be careful with all writings and contracts.

Calls It 'Shock Exchange;' Anti-Depression Plan Wise

— By B. C. FORBES —

HOOVER'S plan to have federal, state, municipal and other public authorities accumulate a sort of reserve fund to be used for construction expenditures whenever employment slackens is excellent.

Wall Street would have us believe that there never, never, never will be depression in the land again. But human nature has not changed. The American people have had the will to buy, especially the will to buy speculative stocks. But some day the will to conserve, to economize, to play safe will predominate. Then will come contraction, and contraction inevitably will bring more or less depression. Incidentally, Wall Street, which is most cocksurely confident, is likely to be hit worst of all.

Some of our ablest-managed corporations years ago adopted the policy of launching additions and improvements, not during booms, but when labor and material were available at attractive cost. Charles M. Schwab, for example, long has been an advocate of that sensible, far-sighted policy.

Spenders of taxpayers' money should do everything possible to make their expenditures count most. To rush into extensive public building or other work during periods of full-flood employment is shortsighted, since it intensifies competition, tends to foster inflation and otherwise to bring about abnormal, unhealthy conditions. A reserve fund of $3,000,000,000, such as Hoover urges, would act as an incalculable valuable stabilizer if properly handled.

Let everybody entrusted with the spending of public money take Hoover's suggestion to heart and act upon it with all diligence.

"BUGS" BAER calls it the "shock exchange." The aptness of this description may be driven home to many before they are much older. If ever any stock market boom rode for a fall, this one has been doing so during recent weeks. Even investment is influenced strongly by psychology. Speculation, it is hardly an exaggeration to say, is governed, dominated, determined by psychology. After action has been carried to wild excess, reaction logically sets in.

For quite a while the stock exchange has been to conservatives a "mock exchange." All human experience impels the conclusion that for those who have blindly gambled it will by and by become a "shock exchange."

DON'T forget that two and two make only four.

WESTERN ELECTRIC is to build a $15,000,000 plant in Baltimore. George J. Cautice, executive secretary of the Baltimore Association of Commerce, writes:

"When you were with us last May you mentioned that Baltimore had no big industry in the electrical field. It will interest you to know that the Western Electric Company has just completed a contract for the purchase of 125 acres of land on our waterfront, just west of our airport, and their first unit, a cable plant, will cost $15,000,000 and will employ 1,200 persons. They state that it is their intention gradually to build this plant to be one of their major operations.

"In our airport we struck some difficulties, but these have all been ironed out and we are going to have a land airport immediately, with the waterfront port to be built as we secure mud from the deepening of our channel.

"The government has allowed our request for larger anchorage facilities and the district engineer has just recommended that we be given a channel 800 feet wide and 37 feet deep."

RADIO this week dropped $34 a share in a few moments. Many have forgotten, if they ever knew it, that stocks can tumble even faster than they rise.

WE often hear of rich men migrating to California. Rudolph Spreckels, president and principal owner of the Federal Sugar Refining Company, has reversed this order. He has moved from San Francisco, his former home, to New York. He has become chairman of the Kolster Radio Corporation, which lately has figured prominently in the newspapers because of its activities and because of the extraordinary rise in its shares.

Saenz Would Follow Path Blazed by Calles

Mexico will elect next November a president for the new six-year term for which one of the recently adopted Calles-Obregon amendments to the Constitution provides.

To be eligible for president of Mexico you must have been in the republic but out of public office for at least one year before election day.

That is why Aaron Saenz has had to resign the governorship of Neuvo Leon in order to accept the presidential nomination of the National Revolutionary party, of which to date President Calles and the late President Obregon have been the strongest leaders.

Gov. Saenz withdrew from the race for provisional president last September and threw his support to his fellow governor of the neighboring state of Tamaulipas—Gov. Portes Gil. With the support of Saenz, Portes Gil was soon thereafter unanimously elected by the Congress for the provisional term which begins November 30 next, and ends in February, 1930.

Few members of the Mexican revolutionary family have been more closely associated with the political fortunes of both Obregon and Calles than was Gov. Saenz. He was only 22 years old when he joined the Carranza movement in 1913 as a captain on Gen. Obregon's staff.

When Obregon launched his movement against Carranza in 1920, Saenz followed Obregon and under his presidency served as undersecretary of foreign relations.

President Calles called Saenz into his cabinet and kept him there as minister of foreign relations from 1924 until 1927, when his native state elected him governor.

Having demonstrated great aptitude for politics, Gov. Saenz was made manager of Gen. Obregon's second campaign for the presidency last year. Had Obregon lived to serve out his term it was a foregone conclusion that Saenz would have been one of the most influential members of his cabinet.

Although he has risen to the grade of general in the army and saw considerable active service during the revolution, Gov. Saenz does not owe his political advancement to his military rank. He will run for president as a civilian and will champion the theory that the military should at all times be subordinate to the civil authority in the government of a republic.

Should he be elected president, Gov. Saenz could be counted upon to lead his country along the paths blazed by Obregon, Calles and Portes Gil.

To date the only other presidential candidate for the six-year term is Gen. Antonio Villareal, who will have the support of the so-called anti-Re-electionist party. He was put out of Mexico last summer, but has recently returned to press his candidacy.

Announcement by the Calles government that Villareal will be just as free to run for president as is Saenz is good news from our neighbor across the border. It is additional evidence that Mexico seems to be steadily emerging from the dark days of reconstruction into what President Calles calls "the governmental or constructive stage" of the new era.

All true friends of Mexico, here and elsewhere, will hope that the presidential campaign now beginning across the border will go forward without interruption, that the best man will win and that he will give to his country an administration distinguished by peace, progress and prosperity.

Naming of Playground For Soldier Hero Urged

Council has received a communication from P. J. Donahoe, chairman of the Tenth Ward Republican Committee, urging that a playground in Morningside be named in memory of Thomas Francis Enright, Pittsburgh boy, one of the three American soldiers whose lives were the first sacrifice in blood of the United States in France. Enright was killed in action November 5, 1917.

It is pointed out in the communication that opportunity is presented to inculcate patriotism among the children of the Tenth Ward by naming their playground for one who, as a lad, played in that ward himself and later achieved the knighthood of valor in laying down his life for his country.

Young Enright, of course, was no mighty chieftain. His career was brief, but it was consummated in the pinnacle of heroism that is symbolical of the service of all of our boys who heard the nation's call for the preservation of our ideals. An accident, chance, fate, whatever you will, chose to make him conspicuous as a symbol of the glory that resides in the defense of one's native land, but the big thing is that he, Thomas Francis Enright, was there to receive the touch of the flaming sword.

The matter of a name for a playground is of no little moment. Named for some politician, the most such an action would cause might be a swelling of the chest on the part of the one so honored and slight raising of the eyebrows on the part of the public.

We have our Rodgers Field, named in honor of Perry Rodgers, first to fly across the continent, a Pittsburgh boy who died in the promotion of aviation. It is equally fitting that we have a field named in memory of the first Pittsburgh boy to sacrifice his life in the American expedition in defense of national honor. It would be an indication that we have not forgotten the serious days of 1917 and 1918.

ONCE OVERS
By J. J. Mundy

WHY use all your best manners and your brightest spirits for those outside of your home?

This is a question put to women as well as to men.

There are many women who appear very charming when anyone outside the family circle is present, but who are quite the opposite when only members of the family are about.

There are men who are overbearing and ugly and demanding in the home.

But to those they encounter elsewhere they are smiling and affable.

There must be enough of a sense of humor and a sense of justice in the home for each to make allowance for the times when one is out of sorts.

The weather, plans interfered with, ill health, not sufficient help and a hundred and one things contribute to annoying thoughts.

And sometimes one allows oneself to be too easily angered.

Suppose the offense is premeditated—suppose it is contrary to your wishes—there is not any excuse for sarcasm, tongue-lashings, recriminations and the get even spirit.

If you must quarrel, let it be a good one, then forget about it.

Tales That Are Told

Fair!

THE tramp knocked at the door and said, "Got any little job, guv'nor? I'll do it for a few cents."

"All right," said the householder. "There's a lawn-mower—cut the grass on this lawn and you shall have a quarter."

The tramp went over about half of the lawn, then felt tired, so he pushed the mower aside and went and asked for his quarter.

The householder gave him 12 cents only.

"'Ere!" said the tramp. "'Alf a mo—"

"That's right," was the reply. "Half a mow—half pay!" and the door shut.

Answered!

"YOU see that row of poplars on the opposite bank, apparently at equal distances apart?" said a stranger to a group of people standing by a river. "Perhaps some of you with keen eyes can tell which two trees are farthest apart?"

The group took a critical look at the trees, and each member selected a different pair. Finally, after much discussion, an appeal was made to the stranger to solve the problem.

"The first and last," he said, as he walked away.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today
By WILL ROGERS

SOME guys are so lazy they just don't like to work, no matter what they might get for working. There was a farmer that was looking for a hired man, and he stepped up to a guy that was standing around the depot and says, "You looking for work?"

"Yeah, sure."

"Well, I got work for you."

"What at?"

"Digging potatoes."

"Oh, I see! Well, it's my pal you're looking for. Fellow by the name of Johnson. He planted them potatoes for you last spring."

"I don't care who planted them. You can dig them for me."

"Yeah, I suppose I could, but you better get Johnson. He planted 'em and he's really the only guy that knows where they are."

The Rhyming Optimist

Drifting Petals

DRIFTING petals in the Maytime,
Carpeting the orchard ways,
Gladly gave their fleeting beauty,
Lent their fragrance to the days.

Drifting petals through the summer
From the roses, red and white,
Garbed the gardens in their glory,
Brimmed the tranquil hours' delight.

Drifting petals in the autumn,
Leaves from every branch and spray,
Whirling past like birds a-flutter,
Made the fields and forests gay.

Now the gardens are deserted,
Bare the orchards, row on row,
Yet the world is white with petals,
Drifting petals of the snow!

LISTEN, WORLD!
By Elsie Robinson

PEGGY'S mad. Here's the why—Dear Elsie:

Won't you please help me? I've just passed my twenty-fifth birthday and mother pulled one of those terrible family reunion dinners for me. If there's anything I despise its relatives, particularly when they won't mind their own business. Mine won't. As soon as we were seated the regular conversation began. So-and-so just got married, somebody else was engaged—WHEN WAS I GOING TO GET MARRIED? Surely I couldn't stay single all my life.

No, of course not. Now there was A—— who was such a nice boy. Why didn't I encourage him? And so on and on, far into the night.

Every time I meet any of them it's the same thing, Elsie, and it's getting my goat! Why should I be forced into marriage just because people think I should be a Mrs. instead of a Miss?

MUST A GIRL MARRY NOWADAYS?

Personally I don't care for marriage. I prefer my freedom, my job and my single blessedness. Am I abnormal in this? Haven't times changed so much for women that marriage isn't any longer necessary unless they fall desperately in love?

Please write a snappy article on this, Elsie. A lot of us girls need one to help us in our fight against these old-fashioned ideas.

PEGGY ADAMS.

Yes, my dear, times have certainly changed for ladies. We can pay our rent now, hook our own dresses and order our own moonshine. We no longer have to marry a bank balance. But—

There's something much more vital to a woman's happiness than a bank balance, little girl. There's that emotional balance of head and heart which every woman needs for her maturity. I do not honestly believe that any woman can find that balance save through marriage.

You do not yet realize that you need that balance. Life is a-hum and a-whirl with new experiences, and you are caught in its dizzy riot. It's enough, as yet, to watch the show—to play. But some day soon you will awake and find that playtime isn't enough. You won't fit into the play world any longer. You will want to go into the greater adventures. You will want that power and charm and understanding which come to the ripened woman.

BUT YOU'LL NEVER KNOW WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT UNLESS YOU MARRY, PEGGY.

"Pooh!" you cry. "I don't believe you." A man doesn't matter so much. But living with that man does matter tremendously. The mysterious mingled irritation and delight that come when you're forced to share your daily life with another nature—the adjustments to a different code—the compromises—the unconscious conflict, the conscious companionship—even the quarrels—all these experiences matter tremendously. They are processes that bring a woman's spirit to its maturity. Without them she remains incomplete.

"But suppose she picks the wrong man? Suppose he doesn't make her happy?"

Strangely enough, that doesn't matter greatly, Peggy. Happiness isn't half as important as you now think it is. The great thing is to live, to live abuntantly.

THAT'S WHY EVEN AN UNHAPPY MARRIAGE IS BETTER THAN NO MARRIAGE AT ALL FOR A WOMAN.

SCHIAPARELLI
By Garrett P. Serviss

THE City of Milan, honored as it has been through centuries of history, has never done anything more worthy of its fame than its recent resolve to erect a monument to its great astronomer, Giovanni Schiaparelli, the discoverer of the canals of Mars. This discovery was first announced 50 years ago, and it soon led to a long, and at times animated, dispute between those who believed in the reality of the faint lines on the planet Mars that Schiaparelli described and those who thought they were illusory. The doubters have at times included some of the leading astronomers of the world, but at present the best authorities admit the correctness of Schiaparelli's observations.

The word "canals" has been widely misinterpreted. Schiaparelli in giving that name to the markings he saw on the planet was careful to say that he meant it to apply only to the form of the objects but not to describe their nature. He did not affirm that they were real canals, but simply that they looked as real canals might look if a large number of them, intersecting one another, ran from sea to sea over the surface of a smooth planet. At that time the dark areas on Mars were generally supposed to be oceans, and it was a natural supposition that the canal-like lines indicated the existence of water courses, either natural or artificial, deriving their supply from those oceans.

Some 15 years after Schiaparelli's announcement I visited his little observatory, where in the rich plain of Lombardy, under the snow-crowned Alps, he still continued his studies with what seemed a very small telescope for such difficult and crucial observations. It was not his considerate kindness to a visitor, but his convincing methods of work that made me afterward a steady partisan of his ideas when astronomers having instruments incomparably greater than his reported that they could see nothing of such as he described on Mars. Such things were there nevertheless.

Later a few other astronomers began to repeat Schiaparelli's observations, and at length in this country Percival Lowell, having erected an observatory on the high plateau of Arizona for the express purpose of planetary study, was able with a large telescope to greatly increase the number of "canals" seen and to make more elaborate maps of the surface of Mars than the beautiful ones that the Italian astronomer had produced. Lowell advocated the idea, which Schiaparelli had merely suggested as a possibility, that the canals were of artificial origin, and he developed theoretical consideration about the super-human powers of the supposititious inhabitants of Mars which have never passed into general acceptance among astronomers. The mystery of Mars which Schiaparelli's discovery first announced remains unsolved and unceasingly attractive.

But his work on Mars is by no means the only claim of the Milan astronomer to monumental fame. In 1889 he discovered permanent markings on the planet Mercury, the motionlessness of which showed that that little planet has had its axial rotation slowed down to practical coincidence with the time of its orbital revolution around the sun; in other words, that Mercury keeps one side always in the sunshine and the opposite side always buried in night—a dilemma in which our own world may find itself caught, with respect to the moon, some unnumbered billions of years in the future—if tidal fraction continues to act so long.

Bible Passages

A Good Name

(Ecclesiastes 7: 1-11)

A GOOD man is better than precious ointment; and the day of death than the day of one's birth.

It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting: for that is the end of all men; and the living will lay it to his heart.

Sorrow is better than laughter: for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.

The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning; but the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.

It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear the song of fools.

For as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool: this also is vanity.

Surely oppression maketh a wise man mad; and a gift destroyeth the heart.

Better is the end of a thing than the beginning thereof: and the patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.

Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry: for anger resteth in the bosom of fools.

Say not thou, What is the cause that the former days were better than these? for thou dost not enquire wisely concerning this.

Wisdom is good with an inheritance: and by it there is profit to them that see the sun.

Oh, These Women!
By LEOLA ALLARD

A MAN of 82 announces he will marry his 40-year-old nurse who saved his life.

She probably intended to be a nurse all her life and now as he is very rich, she need look forward to being a nurse only all his life.

In Luverne, Ia., the Kelch family named their twentieth child Alfred E. Smith. But it isn't the compliment it might be. The wonder of it is that after 19 they had any names left to call the child.

An aviator in Berlin killed himself and his fiancee by sending his plane into a nose dive. The first tragedy of its kind and certainly a tip to wise women that an airplane is no place to start an argument.

Anne Orr, an actress, who became Mrs. Archibald McNeil, Jr., says she will leave the life of a wealthy society matron, as she is tired to death of bridge and teas. She remarks that the trouble with marriage is too much idleness. Both husband and wife, says Anne, should be kept busy.

Most wives keep pretty busy keeping their husbands busy, which isn't enough.

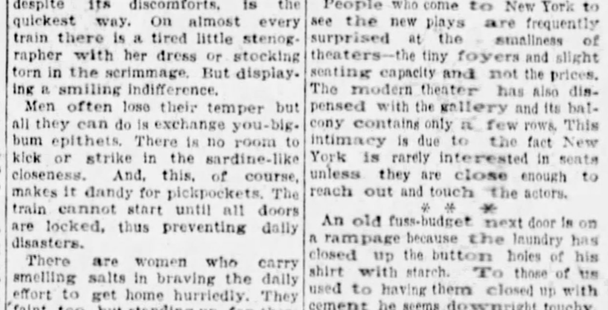
Women who take strong medicines to become thin are fat where they don't suspect it—in the head. And even for that kind of fat exercise is the best remedy. If they exercised their brains they wouldn't be fat in the head.

That handsome Spanish prince, here with his parents for a visit, says that he is here to learn how Yankees fly. We'll tell him. They fly high, wide and handsome.

And when he meets some of the girls he will find out what the Yankee speed limit is—if any.

Natacha Rambova, Rudolph's widow, wears her hair in the same braided knots over her ears, with the same type of Egyption headgear that she wore years ago when she was Rudy's bride. She is thinner and not quite so pretty, but she still has more poise than the pyramids.

New York Day by Day
By O. O. McINTYRE



NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The stranger knits his brow over New York's daily subway crush. And thinks it is terrible. But the chronic customers, forced to endure it, seem to regard the daily manhandling by uniformed huskies as merely part of the routine and grin through it all.

The biggest subway rush is between 5 and 6 in the evening. The pivotal points of the jamboree are Grand Central, Brooklyn Bridge, Fourteenth street and Times Square. Waves of humanity taut with eagerness pour down the kiosks in the glorified football scrimmage.

Station platforms are packed to the last inch and that more people are not swept before oncoming trains is another modern miracle. There are no rails to protect them from the tracks and deadly "third rail." The only protection is the bellowing "Watch Your Step!"

When the every minute local and three-minute express trains thunder in the crowds are poised and waiting to attack the sliding doors. Behind them a flying wedge of guards, shove them in. It is unbelievably rough and tumble and only an unaccountable strain of good humor saves it from rioting.

New York forgets resentment in a desire to get home. The subway, despite its discomforts, is the quickest way. On almost every train there is a tired little stenographer with her dress or stocking torn in the scrimmage. But displaying a smiling indifference.

Men often lose their temper but all they can do is exchange you-big-bum epithets. There is no room to kick or strike in the sardine-like closeness. And, this, of course, makes it dandy for pickpockets. The train cannot start until all doors are locked, thus preventing daily disasters.

There are women who carry smelling salts in braving the daily effort to get home hurriedly. They faint, too, but standing up, for there is no room to fall. Noses are bloodied, buttons are torn off and clothing ripped. More subways are opened, but the congestion continues.

A little ramshackle movie on upper Broadway has emblazoned across its portals: "We have no high hat ushers." Which is a sneer for movies further south.

It strikes me, however, a mellowing influence has touched the marine trained ushers in the glorified temples. For a time they seemed to think they were as grand and lordly as their tight-fitting, gold-braided uniforms. They had patrons herded dumbly in line, resting one foot on the other until the tape went up. But after a time they began to object to the restrictions, and a few lost their tempers. A few dragged the rope with ushers hanging to it inside. Almost every evening an usher got a good shaking and a push into a corner. Today they appear very meek. If a patron suddenly decides to have his own way, they let him have it with a low bow.

People who come to New York to see the new plays are frequently surprised at the smallness of theaters—the tiny foyers and slight seating capacity and not the prices. The modern theater has also dispensed with the gallery and its balcony containing only a few rows. This intimacy is due to the fact New York is rarely interested in seats unless they are close enough to reach out and touch the actors.

An old fuss-budget next door is on a rampage because the laundry has closed up the button holes of his shirt with starch. To those of us used to having them closed up with cement he seems downright touchy.

An English writer named Duncan is writing a book on how difficult it is to stay sober in New York. Title suggestion: "Dunc and Disorderly."

REVOLUTION
By Herbert Kaufman

REVOLUTION is a growth with tortuous, far-reaching roots. Its sources are always obscure. Oppressive power has regularly met its Nemesis in unexpected quarters—because it invariably under-estimates capacities that experience has not measured.

George the Fourth could not be brought to realize that young Dr. Warren and shabby-coated Sam Adams would eventually cost Britain her American colonies.

Any more than Charles the First sensed that a brewer's son, named Oliver Cromwell, would simultaneously seize him and opportunity and rear a commonwealth with the timbers of his scaffold.

In 1914 the last blind rouble in the Czar's strong-box was ready to wager, at odds of a million to one, that Russia's capital would never be called Leningrad.

The great designers of the French revolution were silent moles nibbling away at monarchism.

Many a one of them had actually been trampled, like vermin, under the high heels of the very monarchy they devastated.

Even Voltaire and Diderot were esteemed merely as scribbling clowns by the Court of Versailles.

Before either met his hour of glory, both knew the infamy of imprisonment without trial.

Voltaire, whose name is now a feather in the wing of fame, was a chronic butt in lordly homes, whose rowdy hosts more than once verbally slapped his face.

And when he did finally take a brocaded little pike to task, he was drubbed by lackeys in the open Paris streets.

Since he was not a "gentleman," his assailants refused to cross swords with him.

So, denied satisfaction by duel, he drew his pen and plunged it into the vitals of aristocracy itself.

The pigments with which he and Rousseau and Montesquieu did their work were ground in tears and shame.

Autocracy wantonly slashed their pride and they dipped quills in the wound and wrote its death sentence.
